Shirt Sales Down

The selling of freshman shirts has been going poorly, and since the money from the shirts goes towards the treasury, this year's freshman class might find themselves without any money.

Jack Schofield, social chairman and program advisor for the College Union Board, stated that only 70 shirts at $5.00 each have been sold so far. There is an approximate total of 350 freshmen.

"This is a totally ridiculous figure," said Schofield. "Last year at this time we already had about $400.00 for the freshman class, but this year they are very apathetic about buying them. The Resident Advisors have also been trying to get the freshmen to buy, but it hasn't helped."

One half of the revenue for the shirts would pay for the shirts, while the other half of the money would go into the treasury. Thus far, the freshman class cannot even pay for the shirts already ordered.

"The total bill of the shirts is $750.00," explained Schofield, and if 300 shirts were sold, it would be a total of $1500.00, giving the freshman treasury about $750.00."

According to Schofield, if the freshmen don't have any money in their treasury, it will be impossible for them to hold activities.

"It takes money to run any activity and to have some kind of class structure. When the freshmen hold their elections, the class officers won't have anything to work with. The freshmen are only hurting themselves."

Finally, Schofield added that there is a lack of freshmen input into Marist organizations.

"There is no freshman involvement in their class or in any of the organizations," Schofield said.

Editor Named

This semester, the CIRCLE is happy to announce the addition of a new editorial position.

Miss Irene Ross will assume the title of associate editor, a position created to compensate for the absence of Gregory Conocchioli one of the Co-Editors who is spending the fall semester abroad.

The duties of associate editor are exactly the same as that of the Co-Editors, that is, to coordinate the assignments with the activities on campus, oversee the production of the weekly paper, and contribute to editorial decisions agreed upon by the editorial board (see Editorials for re-definition of the board).

Miss Ross, who has been a hard-working member of the CIRCLE staff since last semester, has all the qualifications necessary for her to handle the job well. A junior and a communications major, Miss Ross also finds time in her busy schedule to chair the entire 1974 Advisor Program under the direction of Cagle Moore and Counseling Services.

Irene Ross should prove to be a welcome addition to the administrative board of the CIRCLE, and will remain in her new position until the annual staff change-over in February when she will rise to the position of Co-Editor.

WASHINGTON, D.C. - ACTION, the federal agency for volunteer service, has awarded $90,000 to Marist College in Poughkeepsie, N.Y. to operate a University Year for ACTION (UYA) program.

A previous ACTION grant of $6,413 was awarded the college in October, 1973 to develop a UYA program.

UYA is a national program which enables college and university students to earn academic credit while spending a year off-campus as volunteers to poverty communities.

The new one-year grant will allow 30 Marist college students to serve in city schools, in youth advocacy programs and in economic development.

Assigned to city schools, 12 volunteers will help to raise achievement levels of students in

by Debbie Nykiel

Mr. Ted Prenting, Associate Professor of Business and Economics, has recently had his first book published, entitled, Humanism and Technology in Assembly Line Systems.

The book discusses mass production assembly and is the first book exclusively on the subject. The book's material is gathered from research papers from the Illinois Institute of Technology, and the other material the authors personally researched. Mr. Prenting's co-author is Mr. Nicholas T. Thomopoulos of Illinois Institute of Technology.

Humanism and Technology takes practical examples and actual case studies to describe the techniques for determining appropriate assembly line speeds. Mr. Prenting feels the book would best be utilized in an engineering school. Since the book came out so late during the year, it won't be used as a course text book until Fall '75.

Mr. Prenting doesn't foresee Humanism and Technology as being a text book here at Marist, although he states, "It (the book) has value in certain courses here, but it is only sections of the whole." Examples of this are to use the book as a supplement in production courses in the Business Department. Also it can be extended to be used in math classes to study math in industry and psychology to look at learning curves and even to political science to examine the nature of work and boredom factors.

Mr. Prenting has all ready received another invitation from a publishing firm to write another book. Previously, he has written articles on human factors and automation in industry. Mr. Prenting thinks working on a book is "a whole other dimension from writing articles." Humanism and Technology in Assembly Line Systems is available to students at the library.

such areas as reading and mathematics. They also will work to lower the school drop-out rate.

Nine other volunteers will assist new minority-owned small businesses. The volunteers will coordinate elementary courses in business administration and management.

In addition, the nine remaining volunteers will work with juvenile offenders in a youth advocacy program. The volunteers will work to lower the rate of recidivism among the disadvantaged youngsters.

The new volunteers are among more than 1,460 students from 42 colleges and universities in 40 states now serving as UYA volunteers.

Throughout the country UYA volunteers work with community organizations in a wide variety of programs. For example, they help the elderly take advantage of the service available to them, teach school on Indian reservations; bring medical services to migrant labor camps and work as legal advisors.

Each volunteer receives a year's academic credit as arranged by the university, a basic living allowance covering housing and food, and $75 a month for necessary incidentals. In addition, $50 is set aside as a readjustment allowance and is paid upon completion of service.

Other ACTION programs are the Peace Corps, Volunteers in Service to America (VISTA), ACTION Cooperative Volunteers, Foster Grandparent Program, Retired Senior Volunteer Program (RSVP), Service Corps of Retired Executives (SCORE) and Active Corps of Executives (ACE).

Letters To The Editors

Presidential Pardon

Mr. Gerald Ford
 President of the United States
 THE WHITE HOUSE
 Washington, D.C.
 Dear Mr. President:

You claim in the name of God to pardon Mr. Nixon, showing him justice with mercy, for you hope to obtain from God judgement tempered by mercy. However, "justice with mercy" extended only to the rich and powerful but not to the poor and oppressed is neither justice nor mercy but smacks of political expediency and makes a mockery of that God in whose name political legitimization is sought.

Mr. Nixon resigned his office after being recommended by the House Judiciary Committee for impeachment. The period during which his abuses of power occurred was one of national turmoil and involved the nation in what many considered to be an illegal and immoral war. Many of the poor and oppressed of this land still suffer in their personal lives, and their families suffer, because they refused to fight and kill, acts which they considered to be a form of criminal complicity. Others with their families suffer because they served Mr. Nixon too well. Yet you pardon the suspected highest criminal of the land and allow to continue the punishment of those who opposed or supported his policies. A pardon for one calls for pardon of all.

"If you fear God's judgement, we all remember His warning: 'Woe be those who decree iniquitous decrees, and the writers who keep writing oppression, to turn aside the needy from justice and to rob the poor of my people of their right!'" (Isaiah 10, 2) To forgive Mr. Nixon without forgiving draft resisters and war deserters and those accused or convicted of Watergate-type crimes is to foster a double standard of justice, one for the rich and powerful, another for the poor and oppressed.

If you would appeal to Christian teachings to justify your action, may I recall that James warned: "Shun no partiality as you hold the faith of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Lord of glory. For if a man with gold rings and in fine clothing comes into your assembly, and a poor man in shabby clothing also comes in, and you pay attention to the one who wears the fine clothing (only)...have you not made distinctions among yourselves, and become judges with evil thoughts?...For judgement is without mercy to one who has shown no mercy; yet mercy triumphs over judgement." (James 2, 1-13)

I object not to a "full, absolute and complete" pardon of Mr. Nixon, even though he still be suspect and could be guilty of many crimes against the country and its citizens. I strongly object, since your action of pardon by executive decision is irreversible, to its limited scope. I object to the denial of a similar full, absolute and complete pardon to those whose crime was to oppose a legally dubious and morally reprehensible war. I also object to the denial of a full, absolute and complete pardon to those whose crime was a faithful service in and according to the standards of the Nixon administration.

Without a policy of merciful pardon and reconciliation extended equally to all, Americans who believe in the God upon whose name you call can only lament again: "The people of the land have practiced extortion and committed robbery; they have oppressed the poor and needy, and have extorted from the sojourner without redress. And I sought for a man among them who should build up the wall and stand in the breach before me for the land, that I should not destroy it," says the Lord-God, "but I found none." (Isaiah 22, 30).

Editorials Welcome

The CIRCLE would like to take this opportunity to welcome back all returning students, faculty and staff, as well as the new additions to the Marist College community.

Community, in fact, seems to be the key word in dealing with campus life this year, especially in the context of an "academic" community. This is not to say that Marist has shunned academics in the past, but perhaps to show a new emphasis on it in the future. This is the year, we have been told by faculty, administration, and student organizations alike, that Marist will drop its frivolous past and emerge as a serious and mature institution.

The CIRCLE would like to help be a part in the process of Marist's "coming of age," and will strive in every way possible to do so. However, we cannot do it alone. The CIRCLE has had in the past and continues to support an open policy concerning articles submitted for publication. We would like to print every article submitted to us, although this is sometimes impossible, but even more than that would welcome any type of input from any student willing to make a contribution not only to the paper, but to the school.

For those who are unfamiliar with our editorial policy, we have reprinted it here:

Policy Statement

I. The editorial Board consists of Co-Editors, Associated Editor, Layout Editor and Photography Editor. The CIRCLE will interpret issues as we see them. For partiality to be shown to any individual, group, or organization the CIRCLE would negate its position as a newspaper for the entire college community.

II. To represent the entire Marist view, there is a need for the CIRCLE to be independent of all governing bodies, both administrative and student.

III. All articles submitted to the Editors from those parties outside of the CIRCLE staff must be of reasonable length, 2-3 type written pages doubled spaced. Deadline for copy is at 5 P.M. Monday evening.

We, the editors reserve the right to edit anything submitted for reasons of length and clarity.

If groups or organizations would like news items of events to be covered, please inform the Editors, CIRCLE reporters will be sent to the event. (Notice of event one week prior to the scheduled event.)

A. All letters to the Editors must be signed. However, names will be withheld upon request, and requests for confidentiality will be honored.

B. Any article submitted to the CIRCLE containing personal opinion along with fact will be treated as a letter or commentary, subject to editorial approval.

IV. Advertising inquiries should be directed to the Advertising Manager, campus mail.

V. Announcements must be submitted from the originating organization or office sponsoring them. The CIRCLE will not quote admission prices in announcements. All announcements must be typed.

Please Note

Anyone interested in joining the new CIRCLE staff should come to the CIRCLE office either Monday or Tuesday evenings between the hours of 7:00 and 9:00.

There are openings in all areas contributing to the total output and production of the paper including news, features, sports, photography, cartoons, typing, and circulation.

If for some reason you are unable to come to the office at this time, please contact either Lyn Osborne, C-628, or Irene Ross, L-616. The CIRCLE office is located in room 168CC, and the box number is C-857.

The Editorial Policy of the CIRCLE is determined by the majority vote of the editors and is in no way subject to the Administration or Student Government of this college.

Honorary Degree

Dear Recruiters and Members:

On July 26, 1974 Brother Tarcisius, our college printer, started his fiftieth year as a Marist Brother. During all this time he was never assigned to any other place. He witnessed the transformation of St. Ann's Hermitage from a training center for the Brothers to the actual Marist College. He recalls the small ball fields and the large farm lands with cows, horses, pigs and chickens. From 1931-36 he milked cows on this farm. The late Brother Paul Stratonic, as provincial, recognized Brother Tarsi's other talents, pulled him out of the barn, bought him a second hand printing press, some type and started the original printing shop in the cellar of St. Peter's.

Since then Brother Tarsi has spent the intervening years as a self-educated printer. Through his work he has saved the Brothers and the College thousands of dollars and he has endeared himself to the Brothers, students, secretaries and faculty of Marist.

I have known Brother for forty-two years. In recognition of his dedicated services I invited several members of the college staff to my home for the first of many golden jubilee dinners honoring Brother Tarsi. (Brother Cornelius Russell believes I was a year too early, but why wait for the fifty-first year to start celebrating?) As keeper of the printed word I am anxious to see the printer of the word honored on his double golden jubilee: fifty years as a Marist Brother and fifty years of service to Marist College. Please help me see the fulfillment of this dream. Storm heaven with your prayers and perhaps the College will see fit to recognize Brother at the 1975 Commencement Exercises by conferring on him an honorary degree.

Devotedly yours in Jesus, Mary, Joseph
 Adrian N. Perreault

CODE 99

By Fr. Leo Gallant

One of the records I got before returning to Marist was Eric Clapton's "I Shot the Sheriff." I had read somewhere that Clapton had been a top rock guitarist with $12 million worth of records, then became a heroine addict, forcing him to retire at 26, physically and spiritually depleted.

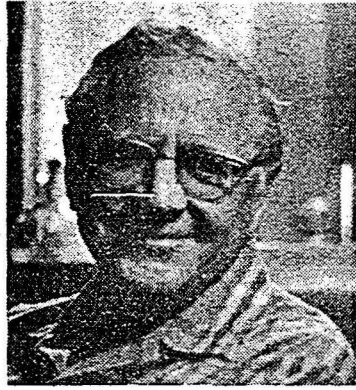

Through people who really cared he became free of addiction and at 29 he no longer believed in his famous song "Nobody knows you when you're down and out" because it wasn't true for him. Now he has returned and when asked what he would like to be doing ten years from now, he answered "I would like to be alive."

I am most grateful to the editors for their invitation to write again. I have changed the title to Code 99 because I want to address it to people who care, who care enough to bring people back to life.

This past summer I spent eight weeks as chaplain in a hospital near my home town in Massachusetts and every now and then I would get a long beep on my walkie talkie, then the announcement "Code 99. Room" That usually meant cardiac arrest. Someone's heart had unexpectedly stopped beating and a special crew, hearing Code 99, rushed in, each with a job to do. They pushed portable equipment on wheels carried emergency tools and medicines. Then the action began: pounding on the chest or using a powerful electric shocker. Often within a few moments the heart would be beating again and the person was given a new life.

In one case the patient was a 23 year old girl, in for a minor operation, but who had a reaction to a medicine causing her heart to stop. Code 99. Rushing feet. Wheels. Clanging on equipment. Pounding. I saw the girl walk out of the hospital 5 days later.

I'd like this weekly column to be a rallying cry, a Code 99, for those who care enough to bring people back from loneliness, frustration, corruption right here at Marist. It took very few newspapermen and judges to buck a powerful government and not let Watergate be swept under the carpet, uncleaned. We need a few people with that kind of charisma here at Marist. Code 99 is dedicated to them.

Wine Contest

HAMMONDSPORT, N.Y. — The Taylor Wine Company Inc., Hammondsport, N.Y. is asking New York State's college students to design the label for the winery's special Bi-Centennial Champagne.

The contest was announced by Russell B. Douglas, senior vice president - marketing and company director, during the official opening of the Bi-Centennial Champagne display at the winery.

A student who submits the design selected as the winner by a distinguished panel of judges will receive a $1,000 prize, Douglas said. In addition, a matching unrestricted gift of $1,000 will be made to the college in which the winner was enrolled when the entry was submitted.

According to Douglas, the contest will be open to any student 18 years of age or older who is attending any recognized institution of higher learning in New York State. This would include junior and community colleges, vocational institutes and specialized schools for the arts and sciences as well as four-year colleges and graduate schools.

Taylor Wine Company is preparing a poster which will be distributed to all colleges and other qualifying schools within the state. The poster will contain all the rules and other qualifications for entering the contest, Douglas said.

The contest will open on September 15, 1974 and all entries will have to be postmarked before the closing date of November 15, 1974.

Douglas emphasized entries will be judged primarily on the basis of appropriateness of design. The name of the winner will be announced on March 1, 1975.

Foxes Place Second

The Marist Running Red Foxes got off to a fast start literally when they placed second of twelve teams from Delaware, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and New York in the tough Glassboro Invitational at Glassboro State College in New Jersey. Fairleigh Dickinson University won the third annual big meet with 72 points, Marist was a close second with 80 points, and Frostburg State was third with 86 points. Defending champion Glassboro State was fourth with 88 points. It was a very close team scoring between the four front-runners. The top three teams received large team plaques and members of the top three teams received individual plaques as well. The top twenty runners also received special plaques.

Marist's top finisher was Fred Kolthay, the sophomore co-captain of the team, who ran a great race and placed fourth. Fred has looked tremendously strong in this early part of the season and has easily shown that he is the Red Foxes top runner this year. The rest of the young Marist cross country team is very competitive and closeness is noted between any two runners on the Marist team. Freshmen capped the second through fourth rankings for Marist in this invitational. Steve VanKeuren from Rhinebeck High School placed 16th, George McCutcheon from Maria Regina High School in Long Island placed right behind Van Keuren in 17th place, and John VanDervoort of William Floyd High School of Mastic Beach, Long Island placed 18th. Only seven seconds separated these three runners. Thus Marist had four men in the top twenty for plaques. Sophomore Brian Costine, the top harrier of 1973 for Marist, completed the Marist scoring by finishing 25th. Freshman Ed Jennings of Power Memorial High School from New York City displaced other team's runners in his 33rd place finish, and Jim Honan of Pearl River High also displaced competitor runners in his 59th place finish. Also competing for the varsity team representing Marist were Myles Gibbons of St. Mary's Boys High from New York City, Tom Jordan, a sophomore who was Marist's fifth man last year, and freshman Chris Collins from Ichabod Crane High School in Kinderhook. All qualified from their rankings in a scrimmage meet one week ago. Mike Sommar of LaSalle High School in Flourtown, Pennsylvania also qualified for the invitational and the varsity squad, but was unable to go due to prior commitments.

"The guys did a tremendous job," acclaimed Marist coach Rich Stevens. "They really showed what team balance means in cross country and its affect. The times were great and all of them showed great improvement in only two weeks of training. If we can hold back on injuries, the Marist fans will see an even better squad than last year's record-breaker. This is the makings of the best Marist cross country team ever!"

This was the first time that Marist has ever participated in the Glassboro Invitational. The team will also participate in the Southeastern Massachusetts University Invitational on October 5 and will compete in three championship meets; The Central Atlantic Collegiate Conference, where they are defending champions and will thus host the meet, the New York State Upstate Championships at Albany State, and the Collegiate Track Conference Championships. Marist has the largest and toughest schedule ever for a Marist cross country team. The team meets 23 teams during the regular season including such big-name opponents as NYU, CCNY, Southern Connecticut State, William Paterson College, Trenton State, Monmouth College, Oneonta State, Kings of Pennsylvania, Nyack and Siena.

The squad also sports its largest turnout ever with twenty runners and three managers. Jim Gillen, the team's only junior member, was elected as co-captain to serve with Kolthay. There is only one senior on the team, last year's number six ranked team member, Jim McCasland. The rest of the team is composed of six sophomores and twelve freshmen.

This Saturday the team travels to VanCortlandt Park to meet New York Tech, Jersey City State College, U.S. Merchant Marine Academy of Kings Point, and very impressive NYU and CCNY. Then the team travels to Trenton State to meet Trenton and Monmouth in what is billed as the toughest double-dual meet of the year for the Big Red Running Machine. The Running Red Foxes return for their home opener on Saturday, September 28 against Southern Connecticut State, William Paterson College, Fairfield University, Pace College and Quinnipiac College.

High On Sports

By John Tkach

ROWING IN THE SUMMERTIME

Last summer three Marist oarsmen continued with the old shell game by competing in the National Rowing Championships at Orchard Beach, New York.

George Schafer, rowing for the Vesper Boat Club of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, captured a first place medal in both the senior eight and senior four competition. Schafer later was invited to attend the National Development Camp which held in Hanover, New Hampshire. This camp is comparable to the United States Second National team. Because of his invitation, George is now entitled to tryout for the 1975 National Team as well as the 1976 Olympic Team which is to be held in the early spring of 1976.

Pat O'Rourke, also rowed for Vesper and was part of the championship four without coxswain. Brian Bennett who rowed for Undine Boat Club, also of Philadelphia, captured a first place in the intermediate eight championship.

Considering that all three of these oarsmen will now just be entering their sophomore year here at Marist, it looks as though the Rowing Red Foxes have a bright future ahead of them.

EXPERIENCE IS BYWORD FOR 1974 RED FOX BOOTERS

When Marist College soccer coach Dr. Howard Goldman sets his team's goals for 1974, almost everything is centered around experience. Last season the Red Foxes registered a 3-7-4 record.

Goldman has both of his starting halfbacks back from '73 in junior Tim Hayes and sophomore John McGraw. Senior Charles De Percin returns after a two year layoff and will be pressing for a starting berth along with freshman Doug Morgan and Dan Wakely.

Seniors Tom McDonald and Bill Capozella lead the fullback contingent along with junior Dave Tompkins and sophomores Jim Titone and Kevin McGhee. Roy Johannessen, a freshman, is the lone newcomer in the fullback spot.

Once again sophomores Jay Metzger and Biff Daino will share the goaltending duties.

The Red Foxes will open their 1974 campaign at home against Southampton this Saturday on Leonidoff Field at 2:00 p.m.
