SUB LEAD OTTAWA MEETING TUM. Sept. 17 - '51, C.I. R.S.

In Ottawa tonight the North Atlantic Council went into spend its full dress debate on the admission of Turkey and Greece to the European defense alliance.

At the end of the meeting, diplomats were confident that a unanimous recommendation to invite the two Mediterranean countries wim will be forth-coming after tomorrow's discussion. The proposal, which came from the Secretary of State Dean Acheson was seconded by Foreign Secretaries Herbert Morrison, of Britain, Rebert Schuman of France and Derik Stikker of the Netherlands.

Now-continue from little learned however!

then out from this esternoon to the end-of the North Atlantic treaty nations got under way again.

At this morning's session, Premier De Gasperi called for wide revision of the Italian treaty, to allow his country to rearm. At the same time, the Italian Premier cautioned against any "provocative action" - meaning that might cause trouble from the Kremlin.

This afternoon, willtary leaders of the Entwelve north Atlantic powers presented the conference with a new master blueprint, for speeding western

the defenses. The new plan, submitted by Britain,

France and America includes plans for the Greeks and the Turks.

In Tokyo, radio monitors, have their multiple ears to the airwaves - waiting, waiting for a reply to General Ridgway's latest truce note.

The Ridgway message was handed to a North Korean Liaison officer at mid-day today, Korean time, in No Man's Land. So far no reply.

The latest note addressed to Conorals Line

11 Sung and Pong Tob Huat throws the initiative back into the Communist camp. General Ridgway telling the Reds that U N negotiators are all set to resume

the talks where the Reds left off last August - in the much disputed neutral zone at Kaesong.

However, so far the Communists evidently haven't made up their minds.

General Ridgway flew to Korea today, to lay future plans in case the Reds finally break off armistice talks. At General Van Fleet's Eighth Army headquarters, the Supreme Commander also got a first hand report on the recent drive made by four U.S. Divisions, and South Korean units.

Meanwhile, on the front, the Reds fell back and Allied patrols roamed back and forth across No Man's Land. There was a sharp counter attack by North Koreans on the eastern front. Twice the Communists charged - hurling grenades, screaming and blowing whistles. They were stopped in their tracks and fled north under a pounding by U N artillery. An American officer who was on a high promontory said he didn't "believe any of them got away."

Meanwhile the Navy has announced a "serious fire" resulting from a plane crash aboard the U.S. Aircraft Carrier "Essex", in Korean waters. @xxxix Casualties are placed at two dead, five missing and fifty injured. The announcement states that a twin jet McDonnell Banshee Fighter was landing on from a mission yesterday, when it failed to hook the EEE carrier's arresting gear, bounced over the deck barriers and smashed into jet planes parked on the forward flight deck. In the resulting gasoline blaze, parked jets were "destroyed," with four others greatly damaged."

Just revealed that five thousand Army, Navy and Air Force men will soon undergo training in the use of "new types of atomic weapons." The demonstrations are to be put on in special maneuvers at Frenchman's Flats, Nevada - scene of the recent super-secret atomic tests. At the same time the Navy has disclosed that it is already  training crews in how to carry atom bombs from aircraft carrier decks - as well as from land bases.

In Washington, today, Robert A. Lovett was sworn in as Secretary of Defense. The Fifty-Six year old Texan (of course pledged himself to defend the nation "against all enemies, foreign and domestic" and called for continued cooperation from the secretaries of the Army, Navy and Air, and the heads of the three services. And that's just the sort of excellent cooperation that Bob Lovett is likely to get. He is generally regarded as one of the ablest men President Truman ever appointed to high office.

Averill Harriman has refused to send Britain that Iranian ultimatum. In his im letter to Premier Mossedegh, Harriman terms the ultimatum "a step backwards" and said he left there was no point in trying to resume negotiations so long as Iran stands fast on proposals that already have been turned down by London. Nevertheless the Iranian Premier has announced that the note will be forwarded direct to the British Foreign Office.

on the home front. Yesterday he failed for the third straight time to muster a quorum for a vote of confidence in the Majlis, the lower house of Parliament. While at Abadan the British staff of the former Anglo-Iranian Company have "kidnapped" five steam tugs, and placed them under the protective gums of the British $22 fleet lying at anchor in the river.

Later word from Teheran: The Iranian gag government has announced that it is now preparing to sign a barter agreement with Soviet Russia - in that way try to make up the losses incurred as a result of xxxx the dispute with Britain. That an Iranian teade delegation has been appointed to work out details with the Soviets - also with the satellite states of Poland and Czechoslovakia.

The announcement states that the Iranian-Soviet trade pact will be signed "soon".

And that, obviously would bring Persia into the Soviet orbit - with possible serious consequences for the Western powers.

Mossedegh's threatened deal with the Soviets is one of - skepticism. The view taken is that Mossedegh is trying to play "a trump card" as a threat to intimidate Britain and the United States into accepting the oil ultimatum. Observers in Britain point out that Iran faces enormous difficulties in trying to deliver oil to Iron Curtain countries. Neither Iran nor the Communists have large enough tanker its fleets and it would take years to construct pipe

At the Library of Congress there was a Constitution Day ceremony, today. One event was a sealing off, in special glass cases, of the Constitution and Declaration of Independence. Those historic documents, already yellow and damaged, are now under a special heavy glass through which wight light will do no further harm. For these cases are now filled with helium, a gas which will act as a preservative, for hundreds, maybe thousands of years.

President Truman was on hand. In an impromptue speech he mentioned the subject of Soviet treaties, lambasted them as "not worth the paper they're written on."

The political news wrings a couple of lively blasts, with a roas of that good old complect fronts.

Truman, Addressing the National Association of Postmasters today, to denounced his political enemies, charging them with - smear campaign. He slashed away at the Republicans for their attacks on government officials, saying it was - contemptible bid for votes. He didn't named the Senator from Wisconsin, but made it clear he was assailing -- McCarthyism.

counterblast from the Republican side is hurled by G O P National Chairman Guy Gabrielson.

Before a Senate sub-committee, today, declared that - if anybody goes in for smear campaign tactics, it is President Truman himself. Referring back to the campaign of three years ago, he said: the President told a Minnesota audience that the Republicans in Congress were the Ferrand boys of big business and

ADD TRUMAN - AGREEMENT

In his speech to the national Association of Postmasters, the President announced another of his ambitions; when he retires from the White House. We've already heard that he would like to go back to the Senate, or maybe even the House. The latest: "If ever I am retired from the Presidency" he told the PERE Postmasters "I'm going to get me one of those machines to ride around in. Those machines it appears. are motor scooters to be used by postmen in a Washington suburb. It seems the Post Office now has several different models of three-wheel motor vehicles under consideration - some with a single wheel in front and some with it behind. Some open. and some with a canvas on top. The President wants a three-wheel scooter.

Democratic Senator Paul Douglas of Illinois
won another round in his battle with President Truman today in that fight for two Illinois judgeships.

The Senate judiciary committee, siding with Douglas, voted to throwout the President's nominations of Illinois Circuit Judge Harrington and Chicago Municipal Court Judge Drucker. So it looks as though those two Illinois Bs Federal appointments will go unfilled for some time - while untried cases pr pile up, and go on piling up.

In Washington today, a former R.F.C. official told a Senate committee what gifts he considered it suitable for him to accept) Testifying before the Senate's permanent investigating committee was Frank Prince, former head of the R.F.C. office of loans, was dismissed earlier this year by Stuart Symington. (Prince admitted to have received gifts from the President of the Lithofold Corporation .ading a camera, perfume, fruit, a ham, and a turkey. Printe claims that he saw nothing wrong with an R.F.C. official accepting gifts. thought "an eight or nine pound ham was all was the way he put right, but I'd stop at twelve pounds, distinction in drawing the meral line which Little puzziling.

The committee is trying to find out whether

Democratic National Chairman William Boyle & used

his influence in obtaining loans for the Lithofold

from a former official of the R.F.C. - nine pound bank hams okay, twelve taboo!

The trial of the eighteen Brooklyn policemen brings a lecture wax on an interesting subject - how to open a horse parlor. Today the prosecution began with an assistant District Attorney relatings the success story of Harry Gross. He is the Number One witness, who last week made sensational headlines when he disappeared - only to be found at a racetrack in Atlantic City. In his dazzling career, Harry Gross, opened many a horse parlor; he is named as the authority for the revelation.

the success story by telling how in 1940 Gross was a runner for a bookmaker - sort of messanger boy picking up bets for his boss. But he was ambitious, decided to start a bookmaking business on his own.

The Rentil a garage in Brooklyn, and did the necessary thing- got protection from the police; to operate. He paid a price, I his gambling operations were never disturbed. Then he opened another horse parlor, and still another, until - he had twenty-seven.

In each case the routine was as follows:

He would contact a plainclothes policeman, who would,

in the words of the Assistant District Attorney
"check whether or not Gross would be interferring with any other bookmaker in the neighborhood." Which pictures the im cops as guardians of the racket,

making sure there was no unfair competition.

payment would be arranged, the deal put through.

All of which, we are told, went right up to the top level of police officials. Running a chain of twenty-seven horse rooms, Harry Gross paid the police at the rate of a million dollars a year.

Such was the success story -- as the state opened its case against the eighteen Brooklyn policemen.

In Hollywood today, a singular proposal of marriage was made - and accepted. Singular - for the fact that the suitor, wooing and winning, had his face and head covered with bandages. You might have wondered how he could pop the question -- with all those layers of surgical gauze. But he did, and the answer was a fond - yes.

In other words, Franchot Tone and Barbara

Payton became engaged -- all over again. The movie actor of romantic roles - is still in the hospital, after the beating he took from love-rival actor Tom

Neal.

In a way, it was a reversal of the law of the animal kingdom - in which the bucks fight it out, and the timid doe selects the victor. But, I suppose Barbara could only feel that it was her own fickleness in romance that caused Franchot Tone to get so bad a beating. See Picking the victor might seem a bit heartless, she selected the vanquished.

"I love him more than ever " ks she said today," and added: "Neal is a brutte! How could I ever have wanted to marry him? I hope Franchot has him arrested."

To all this Tom Neal responds with a mournful sigh saying he still loves Barbara. Today he told of the conversation he had with his rival, before the fight began. "I told Tone" says he, "that I might not have as much money as he does, but I thought I was able to take care of the girl. I'd be willing to dig ditches."

Which sounds like true devotion, alright.

But, tonight Tom Neal may well reflect - lucky in fist fighting, unlucky in love.
