New $50,000 Phone System To Be Installed

by Thomas Hassett
Staff Writer

Installation of the new ITT computerized telephone system, with a capacity of 512 lines and a future expansion of 200 phones, is to be completed by December, says Mr. Ed Frija, Assistant Business Officer. The system being installed by Comm SE Serv is reported to have double the present line capacity.

Frija, who has worked with this system before says the new telephone lines will save the college considerable costs. "The savings will be somewhere in the range of half of what we pay now in the renting of equipment," said Frija. The reason for this savings is that Marist will own the system eliminating the cost of renting it from Ma Bell.

Some of the special features available on the new phones, stated in a report from the Business Office, are direct transfer of calls without operator involvement, call forwarding, automatic call back, conference calling, lowest rate routing on long distance calls, and speed dialing for emergency services. Students will no longer have to get the operator on the house phone to call elsewhere on campus. The system will eliminate the present switchboard and utilize a less laborized switchboard. All phones will be touch tone in style and the unit will be stored in two small cabinets.

The laying of cables has already begun and the continued digging of trenches are to take place this month. "Comm Serve (a major communications system) has offered to install the cable at no cost to the college," reports Frija. The cable being used is said to be of better quality than the former one and last considerably longer. The cable will also be able to be used in the future for AV TV, a computer system, and cable TV hook-ups as there will be terminals in each building on campus. Frija says, "There will be no interference with the campus or the present phone system during the digging of the trenches."

The turnover time from one system to the other is scheduled to take place in December, at which time a total of 28 outside lines (trunks) will have been hooked up to the new switch. Before that time the new system will be operable on some 11 trunks for on campus use and outgoing calls.

When the full system is operable a directory of all phone numbers will be distributed, with no two phone numbers being the same. Also a session will be held on how to use the new system. Frija says, "There will be an accounting print out of every call made to the outside world so that charges can be accessed to each department."

In answer to the question of why it took 10 months to find an acceptable system Frija said, "Ma Bell was given a chance to bid on a system, but it was too costly, so we went with Comm Serv." In a final comment on the ITT phone system Frija added, "With the phone system we're not only beating inflation we are turning the clock back by taking a step forward."

Marist MUSIC To Sing New Tune

by Veronica Shea

The Marist MUSIC (McGill University System for Interactive Computing) will be subject to a major overhaul in the form of a new computer, the final installation of which should be taking place in March of 1981 says Harry Williams, Applications Programmer for Marist Computer Center. The new system, known as the IBM 4341, is of a different generation from the computer presently in use, which is the IBM 370-138. According to Williams, installation of the new machine will require well-advanced planning and a detailed schedule to allow time for the individual sections to be brought in. The computer will be "down" (not available for use) on occasional weekends in order to proceed with these various installments. The computer center will be working with IBM to insure an efficient disconnection of the old system.

"Some of the hardware (physical equipment) will be different," stated Williams, adding, "but the students will not be able to tell the difference." The 4341 is slightly faster and has four times as much main memory, although the present system already has a large storage capacity. It will allow for more people on the terminals at the same time, and cut down on, "swapping time," a term used to describe time delays in the user's processing of data. Four terminals were added to the system over the summer, bringing the total number of nine available to computer students and faculty. Two new languages, PL 1 and PASCAL will be available on the new computer, in addition to VSAPL, FORTRAN, ALGOL W, and VSBASIC, which are in use on the present system.

It may be interesting to note the availability of several computer-use seminars to faculty, staff, and students. One such seminar, "Introduction to the Marist MUSIC System" has already been held. In the near future will be the "Introduction to APL," "MUSIC Context Editor," "MUSIC Script," and "Utilities" seminars. Each will be held on three separate occasions, at varying times, to insure convenience for a maximum number of those interested.

Lanning Eyes New Frontiers

by Deborah Valentine
Staff Writer

Positive effects of rising educational costs are not impossible, says Dr. Jephtha Lanning, who succeeds Brother Joseph Belanger as Coordinator of the Marist Abroad Program.

Educational costs have risen in Spain, Paris and tripled in England (where the majority of Marist Abroad Students are located). Lanning has been exploring the possibilities of placing students in colleges in Puerto Rico and Mexico City. Canada also holds educational possibilities for students, but Lanning feels that, "Canada has yet to be discovered." In reference to the alternatives to high educational costs in England, Spain and France, Lanning says, "there are possibilities if a student is willing to think of creative, interesting alternatives."

Some of the possibilities for reducing costs in England, Spain, and France include individualized instruction with professors; living with families instead of on campus, and going abroad in September instead of August. Lanning notes that he's had "very good contacts with other schools and administrations." Some other alternatives might possibly be worked out because of this.

Presently, total expenses in England are estimated at $8,000.00-$10,000.00, in Spain at $6,000.00-$7,500.00 and in France at $9,500.00. "Ireland is our bright spot," says Lanning. Room and board costs are estimated from $2,400.00 to $3,000.00. Total expenses in Ireland are estimated at $5,000.00.

Lanning says that increased costs abroad are basically due to the weakened value of the American Dollar and governmentally ordered increases in tuition costs in England.

There are thirteen Marist students abroad this semester: four in Ireland, four in England, three in Paris and two in Madrid. These figures are down from twenty-seven students who went abroad in the 79-80 school year. Although applications are running far ahead of any other previous year, the amount of students actually placed is lower due to the inflated prices says Lanning.

"Clifters" Have More Fun and Less Ties

by Dawn-Marie Sturtevant

Twenty-five students at Marist College are now staying out late at night talking to guys in class and no longer having to sneak in after curfew. These students have transferred from Ladycliff College in Highland Falls, N.Y. after their school closed last April.

"We used to put a chair out the window so we could climb in at night," says sophomore Martha "Fred" Eckbold about her experiences violating curfew norms.

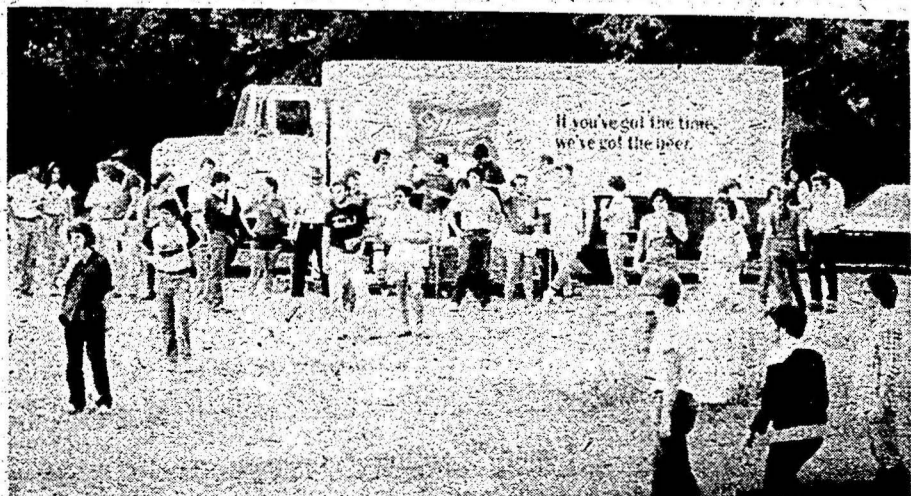

"We could only have guys in the room every other Sunday," stated Diane Kelly, another sophomore.

Although they miss their friends at Ladycliff, the girls are enjoying themselves at Marist. They have had minimal conflicts in their transition to Marist. The greatest problem cited has been the transferring of credits from school to school, but even this has only affected a small percentage of the group. The students are taking advantage of Marist clubs and activities. Many of them are especially impressed with the McCann Center.

"I like the fact that there is an indoor track," mentioned Kate Hedges.

Many of the Ladycliff girls were angered and upset when they first heard of the school's closing. They felt the school could have been saved if they had only been told in time. But as sophomore Donna Butler puts it, "I'd rather be here than there."

Only the Beginning

Dear Editor:

While there were some burdens that the campus community had to bear this past weekend, the first weekend was truly a fine one overall.

The efforts of our teams supported the efforts and renewed the hopes of their coaches and fellow students upon whom great plans are often placed. The social attitude of the students was most heartening, as they truly related as a community to one another.

I would hope that more members of our college community—students and non-students become sensitive to what their individual activities and attitudes can mean to the overall campus. I for one, thank those students, coaches, and residence staff who acted on behalf of this community this weekend in such a way as to enhance the overall pride in and quality of life at Marist. It is too easy for any of us—individuals or groups to seek the fulfillment of our own needs and ignore those of others. I was proud to see so many stand up for quality and consistency of life for a community rather than the few who acted on behalf of individual needs.

Sincerely,
Richard A. LaMorte

How the Cookie Crumbles

"Time, Patience, and Nature are the three greatest healers," stated a fortune cookie from Ho Ho's last Friday night. What perfect timing!

It happened that the previous day the Circle learned that if it had had the patience, in time the Administration would respond to its request for a typewriter.

Last Tuesday the staff anxiously drove to the printer to drop off the copy for its first edition which included the former Circle staff member's request for a typewriter.

Wednesday afternoon the editors received a phone call telling them that a typewriter was waiting for the Circle in the business office. Naturally, the staff was elated, but only for the short time before the realization that ironically, the letter could have been typed on their new typewriter that very day.

So, in response their hastiness, here is the staff's very own proverb for Dennis Murray and the Business Office:

"The time between please and thank you should be one of silence."

Hearts Broken

Dear Editor,

I would like to make a statement about an organization on campus which I have encountered.

I received certain information about the Sigma Phi Epsilon Fraternity when I became friends with and interested in becoming a Little Sister. The fraternity sounded very good and seemed to be an extremely positive force on the Marist campus. I became a pledge to the Golden Hearts Association in May.

Since I've returned to school, I have encountered several members of the fraternity at meals. I have a few close friends who belong to Sigma Phi Epsilon, and I feel they display the attitude and actions a brother should. Yet, there are a large enough number of brothers who displayed negative attitudes and make me feel like an outsider that I have to question what the fraternity stands for.

When I did question several of my "perspective" sisters, the replies I received were: "Wait until you're a Little Sister, the guys will really be nice than." My response to this is, "Why should you have to be a member of an organization that stands for 'brotherhood' to be treated like 'one of them'?" Must a person be part of a select group to be treated like a human being? I resent the attitude that several brothers have, the attitude that they are better than others. I want to know why an organization claims to stand for something that I feel they obviously don't.

My advice to you, Brothers of Sigma Phi Epsilon, is your failing membership could be because my feelings are shared by others. You claim you are unknown; if you're actions at meals were less like a clique and more sociable, perhaps people will have a better opinion of you.

Signed,
Joan Mayone

Open Your Eyes

"So what's going on this weekend?" The most frequently asked question each week as Friday approaches can be overheard almost anywhere. Some may be going home, others may rely on their routine night out with friends to one of the local bars. Yet while everyone manages to be doing something, there is so much happening within the Marist campus that is often overlooked. There are cultural, recreational, and social events that could leave one wondering why he spent so much time "hanging out" in his room.

During the free slot on Thursdays or Friday afternoons, there are usually lectures held, and on Sundays an artist's reception in the Gallery lounge. Several sporting events, from crew races in the morning to soccer or football games in the afternoon, look for student support. Mixers and Pub nights make it possible to have a good time meeting people while often helping to raise funds for a club or sports team. And if boredom still persists, the Campus Union Board sponsors roller skating trips, bowling leagues, and coffeehouses during the week, just to name a few of their many activities. Campus Ministry also offers retreat weekends at various times throughout the year.

Marist provides the beginnings for student involvement, but it can't grow without the interest of the community. Check the bulletin boards, the "Weekly Happenings," or the Circle, and if still in doubt, why not organize something with your resident advisor or the C.U.B.? Why look back on another "typical weekend"?

Help Each Other

To All Marist Students:

A very dangerous situation has arisen this year with the popularity of a new social hang-out. That place is Rockwells Bar. The dangerous situation we face is not that of students driving while intoxicated but that of students walking while intoxicated.

The intersection between Rockwells and Marist is extremely dangerous. The danger lies in the fact that this bar is so close to an arterial highway where students may be unprepared and where driving is encouraged at high speeds.

Last year many of us lost a good friend when he was hit by two cars at that very same intersection. The entire campus suffered from this accident.

This year we do not want to lose anyone at that intersection. So, please if you can avoid it at all do not travel off campus and drink. If you are at a bar and you do not think you can make it home safely, ask someone to help you. Even more importantly, if you're in a bar and you see someone stumbling out—please ask them if you could walk or drive them home. The time you take to do this could save their life and a lot of other people's pain.

Sincerely,
Jim Raimo

"The Next Best Thing..."

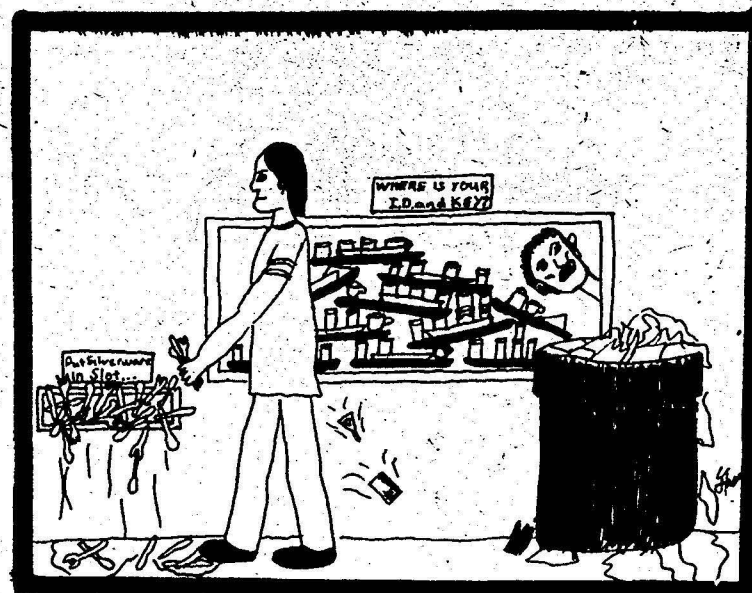

Being part of the Marist community does not necessarily mean that one must reside on campus. There are many students living in the Oakwood and Hype Park dorms as well as off campus apartments. Although one cannot walk across campus and visit these students, the community does not want them to become completely inaccessible. This is why Father LaMorte is trying to put together an address and telephone directory. Hopefully this will unite the community further by promoting interaction among all of the students. (see Campus Announcements)

By recognizing that there exists a segregation of students due to residence, LaMorte is hoping the directory will be one step in the direction of alleviating the problem. This cannot be done if people do not register with the directory.

There is also a van service available to any student who wishes to visit a friend(s) at Oakwood or Hyde Park. These services are provided for any student.

With the many advantages of moving off campus one of the disadvantages is not being in close reach of your friends. It doesn't have to be that way. Now, one's fingers can do the walking!

Skinner's: The New Frank's

by Judy DiScipio
Staff Writer

Marist students will soon bid farewell to Frank's Bar and Grill and welcome Skinner's, a bar which will offer not only drinks, but sandwiches, heroes and soups as well. Mr. Edwin Beck, owner of Skinner's and Easy Street, bought Frank's because he feels it is a perfect spot for a bar, and quotes a famous person, (whose name he could not recall) "There are three things in the bar and restaurant business: location, location and location." Beck says the deal is not finalized yet as they are waiting for the approval of the liquor license. Upon approval, which Beck expects to come this month, he plans to close the building down for approximately one week to ten days for remodeling, hoping to open Skinner's in mid-October.

"We don't want to be real flashy," says Beck whose first intention is to clean up the bar and grill area. "We're just trying to give them a neater, cleaner place to come to," says Beck of his customers, whom he expects to be Marist students as well as decorative windows to give Skinner's a more pleasant atmosphere. He intends to add a stage area in case he decides to have live entertainment, but prefers to use "canned" or stereo music. Beck may occasionally bring in live music, and speaks of the possibility of a Sunday afternoon band during the winter.

Beck plans to stay away from an extensive food menu, creating more of a bar atmosphere. Skinner's will be "priced in the right range," according to Beck. He hopes to see the customers dancing and enjoying themselves. He believes that "people are happier when they're moving." Beck expects Skinner's to be a clean, pleasant atmosphere for socializing and entertainment. "Hopefully, it will entice some of the people across the street."

other members of the Poughkeepsie community.

Among the changes Beck plans to make for Skinner's are elevated tables with chairs by the bar area and a wooden bench sofa with chairs to increase seating occupancy. Also, Beck expects to add bigger,

Fraternity Gets New Pledges

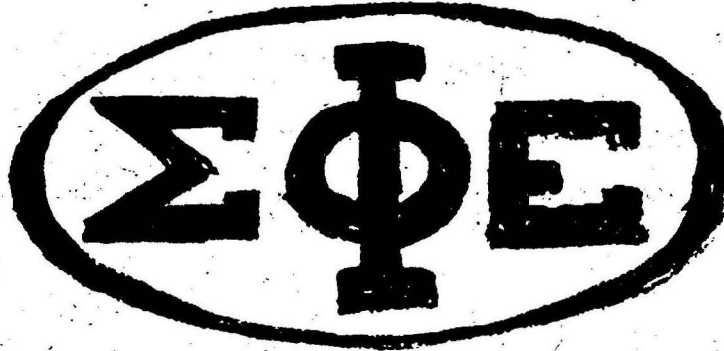

by Dave Smith
Staff Writer

The beginning of a new semester, brings organization and goals for everyone at Marist. This is true with Sigma Phi Epsilon, the fraternity which lives in Benoit house. They are optimistically setting up their plans for the upcoming months.

Sigma Phi Epsilon is now in the midst of planning their pledge period. They presently have 18 pledges who will have to go through a six week pledge period. The pledge period allows the pledges to learn about the fraternity, get to know the brothers, and it consists of many different activities ranging from little sisters being serenaded, to pledge-brother athletic events.

Jim Corbett, the president of the fraternity, is anticipating a good semester. "Some of the things we have planned are a fund raising raffle, a president's reception for the staff and faculty to be held in Benoit, a trip to Shea on the 28th of this month, and our blood drive on October 29th." He hopes everyone will donate to make this one successful as the past ones. He also states what will make a great semester is the enthusiasm of the brothers.

Question: Directed to Juniors and Seniors.

Do you feel that the changes on campus have had a positive or negative effect on the school?

Margi Mons-Senior: "Positive. The norms should positively affect the academic standings of the school."

Mary Wilczek-Junior: "Positive. The faculty as well as the students now have more chances to get involved in how the school is run."

Mary Anne Coll-Junior: "Positive. The campus as a whole seems more involved with one another. There are more activities now."

Debbie Berger-Junior: "Positive. The physical and academic changes on campus have added to the recent increase in the student body."

Come To The Cabaret

by Judy DiScipio
Staff Writer

"More involvement from the Marist Community is the major goal of M.C.C.T.A.," (Marist College Council on Theatrical Arts) says president Marjorie "Dee" Nell. There are 4 productions planned for this year giving many interested people a chance to use their talents in areas such as acting, singing, dancing, make up, costumes, scenery, etc. "There is something for everyone," says Nell.

Nell would like to see new faces get involved with the theater, and hopes that faculty and staff members as well as students express an interest. The different departments at Marist can participate by helping out in their particular area. For instance, fashion majors can design and make costumes or work with make up. Producing is separate from the more theatrical aspect of a production, and a valuable area in which business majors can invest. Nell also encourages males to become involved with theater. Male actors and dancers are needed, but often times there are not enough guys auditioning for the parts.

"I personally am going to try to get Marist viewed again by the Poughkeepsie Journal," says Nell, who thinks Marist puts on very good shows, but because it is not a big or well-known school, it has never been recognized in the theater. She plans to have the MCCTA organize social events like raffles and mixers to increase interest and participation.

The first production planned for this year is the musical "Cabaret," directed by Glen Casall and scheduled to appear November 6-9.

"Dr. Doolittle" is the Children's Theater production for this Spring that Nell herself will be directing.

Survey Finds Interesting Results

by Mike Wiese and Chris Campbell
Staff Writers

A recent survey of some 30 upperclassmen residing here on campus brought some interesting responses to the question of Campus Life: This year vs. Last.

The majority of students questioned felt lonely, abandoned and mainly disappointed with the administration and their new housing policies. Students expressed their concern for their fellow classmates who were practically forced off campus due to the unusually large incoming freshmen class. Susan Dubatowka, a senior, felt, "The administration is biting off more than they can chew with such a large freshmen class. Their concern appears to be too much in the future and not enough on Marist today." In support of this, Jill Kaiser, a junior, said, "The housing department was just not organized or ready enough for such a large group of freshmen as was shown by their push for students to move to Oakwood as well as their rental of a local hotel." All the students who responded to the survey with concerns towards housing had one common feeling; They felt the freshmen are suffering from a lack of upperclassmen exposure because 1) the all freshman dorms, and 2) lack of upperclassmen on campus.

This survey also brought out 3 other points. All 3 expressed by the upperclassmen as being positive changes. One was the appearance of a stricter discipline policy by both security and the R.A.s. Barry Jamison, a senior resident advisor, said, "A simple discipline crackdown on a select few makes campus life better for all." Also expressing his feelings on this change was James Spratt, a junior, who said, "The R.A.'s this year seem to be a little quicker with their verbal warnings as well as their tendency to write someone up."

The second positive point brought out concerned opportunities for students to enhance their knowledge. Bill Renrick, a senior felt "This year Marist has broadened its academic schedule as well as its social calendar to include more opportunities for a larger student participation."

The final response to this survey concerned the removal of the campus art work from the front of Champagnat. Charles Lamberta, a junior, who has lived in Champagnat for 2 years, said, "I can now practice my down and out plays with no fear of running into a steel girder."

WMCR Is Back

by Matthew Cole
Staff Writer

WMCR is back on the air this year, with a new manager, a larger staff, and more importantly, an improved attitude.

According to station manager, Bill Palmeri, there are thirty-five station members, eighty percent of whom are freshmen. Palmeri says, "the freshmen have taken a professional attitude, whereas past students have regarded their work at MCR as nothing more than a hobby. In the past we haven't been taken seriously. This year will be different."

Palmeri intends to increase the standard of MCR's programming by taking on paid advertising, requiring certain music to be played, broadcasting specialized music programs and talk-shows, and making the station an advertising service to all Marist clubs and teams.

"The station's purpose is lost without a sizeable audience," says Palmeri. Many students believe that WMCR remains a 'slipshod' operation without having given it a change. Palmeri says, "Tune us in, you'll be surprised."

Time Out For the Lord

(Mark R. Wegg is Assistant Campus Minister working under Father LaMorte, the Catholic Chaplain of the college. Mr. Wegg received his B.A. in Communication Arts from Seton Hall University, New Jersey, and his M.A. in Religion and Religious Education from Fordham University, Bronx, New York. His office is at Byrne Residence and he is available to meet with any student interested in participating in Campus Ministry.)

Death shall have no dominion

Many members of the college community deeply felt the passing away of John Menapace. When death visits us so closely, no amount of philosophizing about its reality, no surveying of psychological studies on the bereavement process, or no acquaintance with the five stages of death according to Kubla Ross can assuage its finality. The death of loved ones strikes us like lightning. We are somehow dumbstruck, our hearts pierced as never before. I once heard a poet speak on how she had come across a tombstone in a New England graveyard which read, "It is a fearful thing to love that which death can touch." Indeed it is, for the death of one close to us does not put ashes on our forehead but mingles them with the deepest emotions in a way that makes us take a pause.

Last Tuesday night a Marist student who attended the prayer meeting at Byrne Residence shared with the group how John's death made him stop and reflect about the brevity of his own life. Rejecting a maudlin approach to the issue of life and death, this student went on to say that this death made him more convicted in wanting to serve the Lord with his life. I saw the truth in Ernest Becker's words that death actually gives meaning to life. This student was in search for deeper meaning of his life. Death instead of completely disarming him spurred him on to search more deeply for the Lord in his life, who gave him meaning. Though I did not know John personally, I can honestly say that his death has already brought fuller life to others. As scripture says, "How strange are the ways of God and how inscrutable his designs," — that death would bring life!

Yes, faith is tested by the reality of death. It is tried as "silver and gold is tried seven times over." Yet, what remains is true intimacy with the Lord. What gets burned away in the process is for our eventual good and—if we hold the vision of the kingdom before us—we will arrive at greater happiness because we have greater meaning. The reality of death as part of life challenges the christian to live in utter trust in a loving God. It is at this crucial moment that the christian says yes I believe or I discount belief as foolishness. We must decide if we truly believe that Jesus is the Resurrection and the life. Though one's heart may be torn, faith buoys up the spirit of he who trusts in God—for death is known not as a putting out of the light altogether, but as someone put it, death is rather known as a turning off of the lamp as the dawn approaches. It is our faith in Jesus that makes the difference. He is the one that makes all things new. He and He alone. He is the beginning of our lives and He is the end—so we believe. And so, John's death in the light of faith, even as we feel his absence, leads us to the hope that "death shall have no dominion."

Maintenance Projects

by Thomas Hassett and Theresa Sullivan Staff Writers

Three campus beautification projects are being completed at the north end of campus—each one dealing with the construction or widening of roads, says Director of Construction Nilus Donnelly.

A new road is being constructed next to the site where the old Water Works road was. The new entrance will begin at the intersection of Fulton Street and Route 9 and wind into a straight road next to the Chapel. The old entrance, across from Frank's Bar and Grill, is expected to be covered by grass and a parking lot near St. Peter's Building.

The road that runs north-south in front of the Chapel is being widened and a new road was bulldozed next to Gregory and Benoit Houses—leading to the maintenance building located at the northern most end of campus.

An ITT TD 500 telephone system is expected to be installed next month and completed by the end of the year. The new system will be composed of 300 phones and "is expected to save thousands of dollars on the estimated present $50,000 yearly phone bill," says Donnelly.

Donnelly says that Marist will confront three major construction projects. After acquiring enough money, Marist plans to build a new communications center in the old gym, and possibly complete new on-campus housing facilities on the 45 acres of land near the maintenance building.

A New Voice on Campus

by Veronica Shea and Dawn Sturtevant

"Marist is the most friendly educational institution I've ever been to," says Dorothy Ann Davis, Marist's new Director of Choral Activities. Mrs. Davis is the former head of Ladycliff Music Department, a position she held for the last seven years. She attained her Bachelors and Masters degree in voice and organ at Westminster Choir College in Princeton, N.J. Presently, she is working on her doctorate in conducting at Temple University in Philadelphia.

"I've seen a lot of talent" says Davis "and tremendous possibilities on the campus."

Davis has already formed the Marist Musical Union, an organization of faculty, students and staff who meet every Wednesday afternoon at 5:00 for an hour and a half of singing. In addition, she is able to offer three vocal classes: Choral Singing, Vocal Skills I, and Intermediate Voice I. She plans to combine her classes and the Marist Musical Union for several concerts this fall, one of which will take place at West Point on December 7th. Included in the program will be singing groups from such schools as Fairfield University, Villanova, Nyack College, and the West Point Cadets.

Although the musical facilities at Marist are not totally adequate, a piano has been added for the use of choral activities. "Everyone seems willing to cooperate," says Davis, "and in time, we'll make things work."

BOOTERS RAISE RECORD TO 4-0

Upset nationally ranked So. Conn. St. 2-0

By Mike McCarthy
Sports Editor

The Marist College soccer team raised their record to 4-0 with two impressive victories this week. On Saturday September 20, the Red Foxes easily handled Southampton College by the score of 5-3. On Tuesday, September 22, the Red Foxes traveled to Southern Connecticut State College and came away with a 2-0 victory. Southern Connecticut State College was ranked fifth in the nation among Division II schools.

Against Southampton the Red Foxes came out flying. Julio Rostran opened the scoring at 29:51 of the first. Less than three minutes later Tom Homola scored to give Marist a 2-0 lead.

Southampton scored with 21:50 left in the half to cut the Marist lead to 2-1. Raul Verne scored within one minute of the Southampton goal to bring the Marist lead to 3-1. Rostran assisted on the goals credited to Homola and Verne giving him a hand in all three of Marist's goals.

A defensive lapse was the cause of Southampton's second goal but Marist settled down to score two more goals by the end of the half.

The "Norwegian Connection" of Tore Udahl and Oyvind Larssen combined on Marist's next goal. David Jaco held the ball in the corner, passed to Udahl who sent a crisp pass across to Larssen for the goal. Larssen scored the last Marist goal on a penalty kick. Southampton added another goal in the second half to finish the scoring.

Marist coach Howard "Doc" Goldman felt that the team played "very well in the first half but let down a bit in the second." Goldman feels that the change in this years team is that, "we have gone through a maturing process, which accounts for our scoring punch increase."

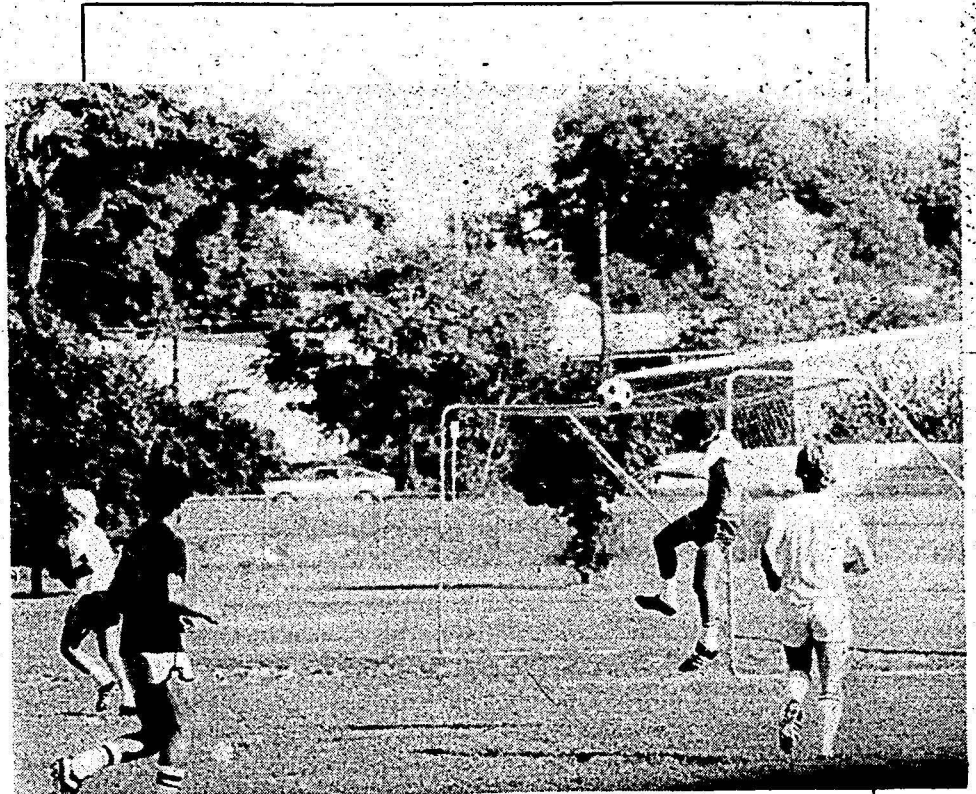

Marist outshot Southampton 30-8 with Marist goalies making seven saves while the Southampton goalie made 22.

The story looks even better with the 2-0 shutout of Southern Conn. After a defensive struggle throughout the first half, David Jaco, assisted by Julio Rostran, scored at 44:04. The second half's only score also came late, with Bob Sentochnick assisting Julio Rostran for Marist's second goal at 42:48.

"Southern Conn. has a very strong team, excellent," said coach Goldman after the game. "But they gave us room to play, more room than we gave them." Southern Conn. outshot Marist 18-5, but, as Goldman put it, "Our shots were more dangerous."

Since the game was defensive struggle, and Marist won the struggle, the goal-tending comes into question. "Great," said Goldman. "Andy Homola made two excellent saves that would have tied the game otherwise." Homola made 15 saves, as opposed to 5 from his counterpart, Bob-Feste.

Will Marist be able to play at this level all year long? "If we can keep up this level of intensity, we'll have a successful season. I don't think we, as a team, know how good we can be yet," said Goldman.

Booters work out between wins at Leonidoff.

Gridders take Opener, 28-7 Corsetti sets Met. Conf. record

by Barry Lewis
Sportswriter

The Red Foxes of Marist, in their first game of the season, easily defeated the Kingsmen of Brooklyn College 28-7 in Sunday afternoon's football action at Marist.

In a game which Marist head coach Mike Malet said would set the tone for the rest of the season, the Red Foxes hit as hard as they could on defense, ran as well as expected and showed a packed home crowd just what a special team unit can do to a game.

Starting four freshman, one at quarterback against a veteran defensive unit, Marist on paper seemed to be in for a tough outing. This was not to be, as the young offense ran with ease through the Brooklyn defense on every possession. Immaturity and impatience took control of Marist, as they ran on every play to the Kingsmen 10 yard line, only to be stopped on each play with fumbles and illegal procedures against the offensive line. Marist was able to keep Brooklyn silent, as the first quarter ended with neither team on the scoreboard.

Where the running game had been the Red Foxes mainstay in the first quarter, the passing attack was all Marist needed to put itself on the board. First year quarterback Jim Cleary had masterfully controlled the tempo of the team to that point, and with skilled passes to second year tight-end Tom Kelly, the Foxes were on the move.

With the ball on the Brooklyn 20, and 2nd and 8, a Marist pass to back Ed Pruitt was complete, but Brooklyn was called for interference and the Foxes got the first down on the 11 yard line. Two plays later, Cleary found himself with plenty of time to loft a quick pass into the hands of Kelly for a 6-0 lead. The extra point attempt by Kevin Daley was good and Marist saw its first lead of the season on the scoreboard.

After several series of downs by both schools, Marist found itself with the ball on the Brooklyn 40 with less than 4 minutes to play in the half. A pass to Kelly and a 21 yard pick-up brought the ball to the 17 as Marist called time out with 45 seconds remaining. After regrouping with a huddle after forcing themselves out of bounds, the Red Foxes completed their second successful scoring drive with a 7 yard pass by Cleary to Mike Spawn in the end zone for a 13-0 lead. Once again the extra-point attempt by Daley was good and that's how the half ended as the Red Foxes left the field with a 14-0 lead.

"I'm really happy with the offense, and just a little disappointed that we couldn't score in the first quarter," commented Marist quarterback Jim Cleary at the half. "I knew we would have more chances, and we just have to keep everyone up on the game."

If anyone was up on the game in the second half, it would have to be defensive half back and punt return specialist Lou Corsetti. With the clock hitting the midway point of the third quarter, Corsetti took the punt on the 15 yard line and proceeded to find the end zone, wide open and practically untouched to give Marist a 21-0 lead after the successful extra point.

It was then back to defense, and second year player Dennis Diesel was literally the "Diesel Train," as he hit Brooklyn quarterback Tom Sajecki in the ribs for the hardest shot of the game, if not the century. "It was the hardest hit I've ever seen in all my years of college ball," said coach Malet after the game.

While Diesel and the rest of the defense shook up the Kingsmen offense, it was back to Corsetti and his turn to shake up the Brooklyn defense. Once again returning the punt for Marist, Corsetti took the ball on the 19 yard line and ran up the left side of the field near the Brooklyn bench. "I saw the defense coming, so I quickly switched gears and moved to the opposite side of the field," said Corsetti after the run. "The blocking was really great, and without it, I would have been going back to the bench with no gain."

The score was the Red Foxes fourth, and for the fourth consecutive try, they made the extra point to go through the fourth quarter with a 28-0 lead. Brooklyn though, was not about to leave Leonidoff Field empty handed, as back-up quarterback Nick Kabir lit tight-end John LaBarbera in the end zone for six points of their own. The extra-point was good, and the game ended with the score, 28-7.

X-C Men third

By Eddie Giltenan

Seniors Paul Welsh and Ron Gadziala once again turned in excellent performances this past Saturday as they paced Marist to a strong third-place finish at the regular season meet in New Haven. S.M.U. captured first place and the University of New Haven took second, only one point ahead of Marist.

Welsh and Gadziala finished third and fourth respectively, separated by only three seconds. The two seniors have now broken course records in two of the three meets in which they've competed. Marist's team scoring was rounded out by senior Matt Cole, soph Brian Hanley, and junior Joe Burleski.

Coach Bob Mayerhofer was especially pleased by the performances of Cole and Burleski, both of whom had their best races to date. "I would have to say that Matt and Joe were our most valuable runners of the day," says Mayerhofer.

All the news was not good however. Marist was hurt again this week by what Mayerhofer cites as a major weakness of the team the large time gap between second man Gadziala and third man Cole. Cole finished a full minute behind Gadziala. In that minute, four New Haven runners slipped by, thus enabling them to defeat Marist by that slim one-point margin. Cole, a senior who missed the '79 season because of overseas studies, is optimistic about the problem. "In '77 and '78 I ran right with Ron (Gadziala) and Paul (Welsh). Hopefully, as I regain my strength in the coming weeks, I'll be right with them again."

This Saturday the team will travel to Pennsylvania to compete in the Indiana Invitational. It will be Marist's first big test against the top Division 2 teams such as Indiana, Glassboro, and Edinboro State. These are the teams Marist will be competing against in the N.C.A.A. Division 2 qualifying meet on Nov. 1.

Last year Marist missed qualifying by one place and Mayerhofer is guarded in his outlook for this year. "In order to qualify, this team will have to improve. The teams that beat us last year, Edinboro, Indiana, Shippensburg, and Lowell are all running phenomenally so far this year. It won't be easy to beat them. Everything has to come together for us. Last Saturday only 1:14 seconds separated our third and tenth man. Strong competition between these runners can only benefit the team."

High on Sports

By Mike McCarthy

There's no reason to deny it, underplay it, or even reward it. We looked pretty good this weekend! Amidst the well received posters, promotions and pre-game hype on our campus, the athletes produced on the field to make the entire sports weekend a success.

There were many things for a Marist student to be proud of this weekend. First, a pep rally outside Champagnat on Friday night started out on a positive note when Mike Malet, Doc Goldman and Bob Mayerhofer spoke about their respective teams, and president Dennis Murray closed with some words of optimism for Marist sports fans.

But, all the pre-game hoopla in the world cannot produce on the field, that's up to the athletes. And boy, did they produce. The soccer team completely outclassed Southampton in its home opener, and the cross county team, although finishing third in the overall standings, had two record breaking runs. And the big one, the 28-7 football romp over Brooklyn College, served as the third leg in one of Marist's biggest sports weekends ever.

But one of the biggest reasons for this comment is once again only indirectly related to on-the-field occurrences. The enthusiasm shown by the non-roster students at the pep rally, soccer and football games can only serve to make one proud to be at Marist.

The coaches agreed, both at the rally and in the post-game comments, that to have a large enthusiastic crowd at the games can only help the team on the field. So we, who went to the games as either players or spectators, can all take pride in the final results of the weekend. Marist is moving again, and we're all better for it.
