New Faculty Members

Mr. Lewis

Brooklyn, New York has sent Marist a new English teacher in the person of Mr. Robert Lewis. His high school education was obtained at St. Augustine's in Brooklyn. From high school Mr. Lewis went to Manhattan College on a New York State Regents Scholarship. While at Manhattan he was editor of the yearbook in his junior year. After graduation with a B. A. in English, his next step was to enter Columbia University where he majored in Contemporary Literature, and was awarded an M. A. in English. His Master's thesis was on Robert Lowell, a contemporary American poet.

When asked his opinion of Marist, Mr. Lewis commented that 'he felt the campus had an open and industrious atmosphere that was quite stimulating. He also said that he appreciated all the help that had been given him by the faculty with his many problems since this was his first real teaching assignment.

Besides being a proctor on the sixth floor of Leo Hall, Mr. Lewis also teaches several courses. He has two freshman courses, Composition and Introduction to Literature and a major English course, Contemporary English and American Literature.

Mr. White

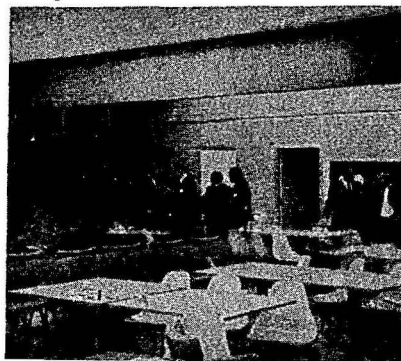

A new member of the increasing nucleus of faculty members at Marist is Mr. John G. White, a native of Brooklyn, New York. After completing his secondary education, he enrolled at Belmont Abbey College, North Carolina where he received his B. A. in History. He then served his country for a period of "Five years, one month and eleven days" as a member of the U. S. Navy. He held the ranks of Hospital Corpman, Navigator Bombardier, Ensign, and in 1958 was assigned to the Lexington VAH Squadron 6 as Lieutenant, J. G.

Shortly after his term in the Armed Forces, he pursued the furthering of his education at Fordham University, where in 1961 he was awarded his M. A. in History. Mr. White hopes to obtain his Ph. D. by next year, and is currently writing a thesis about Seventh Century Monastic History.

In reference to Marist, he is very impressed by the intellectual responsiveness of the student body, which he feels stems from the better interchange of ideas among them. This he claims is a definite advantage Marist has, coming from an environment of small college life himself. Its campus is a reflection of the students who occupy

Sports Dinner Opens Season

To begin the 1963-64 sports season here at Marist a cocktail hour and dinner were arranged for the evening of October 1st, before our soccer opener at Bard College.

Attending the cocktail hour and dinner were many of the area athletic directors, coaches, officials and news and sportscasters. Also attending were: Russell Hadden of Federal Bearing Company and Hugh and John Mulligan of Associated Press, New York, along with Dr. Howard Goldman, the coaching staff, the Athletic committee, Brother Linus Foy, President of Marist and Brother Paul Stokes, Dean.

Mr. Richard Freer, Co-Editor of The Reynard, Fred Weiss, captain of the basketball team, Bill Morrissey, Treasurer of the Marist Student Council, Fred Wadnola, assistant Public Relations man, and George Hallam, Editor of The Record represented the student body and helped to organize the cocktail party in Adrian Lounge under the able leadership of Mr. Robert Norman who was responsible for the affair.

it, a never ceasing mode of activity, striving for the development of its best potentials.

Currently, Mr. White can be found instructing such classes as Medieval History (his specialty), Medieval Monasticism, and Modern European History.

The Plebiscite

by Charles Cassidy

Dear Editor:

Yesterday two of my friends and I were talking about our school and we came to one question which we were unable to answer. Since you are the editor, we are asking you.

Mr. Editor, is there a Student Council?

Of course I said there is a Student Council. They, however, pointed out that the regular meeting that was scheduled for Sunday October 6th had to be cancelled because there was not a quorum. They said that at 5:30 PM (that's what time the poster said the meeting would be) the only people at Adrian Lounge (that's where the poster said the meeting would be) were that kind man Mr. Donald Rollerl and also Messrs. Murphy, Sheehan, Morrissey and Townsend which of course was not enough to have a meeting, so it was ????????

Again, my friends pointed out, there was a poster calling a special meeting for Sunday October 13th, also at Adrian Lounge, but this time at 7:30 PM. However, when my friends appeared for this meeting all they found was that same kind, patient and understanding man - Mr. Rollerl - but this time he was joined by Messrs. Verrico, O'Neill and Barisonok (that's right, the missing ones from the 6th). Needless to say once again there were not enough to have a meeting, so it was ????????

Now I would not bother you, Mr. Editor, but my friends insist that this is what happened and I just cannot, no sir I just cannot believe this. My friends tell me that the Student Council has yet to act on the Allocations (that's the money, that is) and we all know that our Student Council would not do such a thing as that, would they sir?

So Mr. Editor will you please tell my friends and I, that there is a Student Council. There is, isn't there?

William Treanor

Dear William,

Yes, there is a Student Council. So far Mr. Rollerl, our president has been very patient with the laxidical attitude of some of our council members. Lets hope that sometime soon in the future his patience is not tried again and that we have a Student Council meeting. It's true that they have not acted on Allocations and many of the clubs such as the Reynard and the Record are beginning to feel that there isn't a Student Council.

I know that Mr. Rollerl will continue his fine efforts towards having a first meeting of the Student Council on Allocations. Let's hope that somehow Messrs. Murphy, Sheehan, Morrissey, Townshend, Verrico, O'Neill and Barisonok find it within their power to attend a meeting of the Student Council all at the same time. I hope this is not too much to ask of responsible college students.

Everyone will recognize the importance of the spoken or written word in our society. As a means of communication it surpasses any other devised by man. The written word as Wordsworth once put it, "is man speaking to man". The history of humanity bears witness to the fact that the written word has shaped and molded cultures, erected and toppled governments, and in general determined the destiny of man. In the wrong hands it has become at times a vicious tool to enslave and terrorize a populace. In the hands of men of conscience it has served a higher purpose, elevating mankind from the muck and slime of a primordial existence to a position of nobility and godliness. Today we face a problem much like that of the crisis-patriot who stirs from the dusty cobwebs of a living room chair only in time to meet his own personal emergency. This world condition has become one of indifference to times, people, and events and which incidentally is reflected in the lack of response by the individual to the world around him through appointed organs of communication. Such a problem confronts us at Marist.

For three years the Literary Club of Marist has served as an outlet of expression for students. Entitled The Mosaic, the publication has served as a mirror of the thoughts of our students and indirectly a picture of active minds exploring the past and future for those outside the campus. This year the Literary Club once again opens its doors to those students wishing to communicate to others outside their own sphere. With student cooperation the club is focusing upon the publication of two "Mosaics" and, if the material warrants, the institution of the original conception of the magazine on a quarterly basis.

The objectives of this club can be realized by only one means -- student cooperation. The problems faced by the Literary Club have been reduced to one and that is outlined at the beginning of this article, inactivity. To survive as an active and potent voice of the student body of Marist we must have contributions, not from the fellow sitting next to you but from you. We therefore ask for contributions in the form of short stories, poetry, and essays covering a multitude of subjects. Such material can be delivered to the club by presenting it to Brothers James Heaney and William Cowie, or to Mr. Charles Cassidy, or by submitting it directly to the English Department. Your response will form the answer to the following plebiscite: Shall the Literary Club die at the hands of an indifferent student body or shall it be a recent. on p. 5

IMPRESSIONS

Beggars in any large city are always to be found. The poor are always with us. And Paris has many mendicants. Probably even more than her counterpart on the other side of the Atlantic, New York.

The Metro (subway) stations are profitable places for these people to be, as well as at the doors of churches. But they are not limited to these places. A sidewalk along the Seine is even better for some types.

The poor of Paris can be broken down roughly into five classes. First, there are the religious. These are mostly Sisters who beg by the churches. Then there are the blind and the lame who can be broken down further into two classes, the workers and the non-workers. The workers are those who offer you something in return for a coin. Some of them sing, but most of them play an accordion. The non-workers are either the very old or the very lazy. These just stand there allowing their shabby appearance to speak for itself. And, there are the drunks. With wine being as important and as cheap as it is here, there are many of these.

The last class is that of the starvane artist. Truly, there are many people with talent here, so many in fact, that they all can't make a go of it. The artists are the Seine-siders. Find a nice day, and along the Seine you will find these people with their paints, or in some cases, with their chalk. The chalkers are the beggars. They mark off a block on the walk, but a cup or a hat next to it to collect the tips, and they are set for the day. There are many fine things done this way - too bad they can't be picked up and sold.

There is a song in The States called "The Poor People of Paris." I have yet to hear it here, but as I remember it it is rather on the lively side. At any rate it is a lot more lively and much happier than the unique and colorful breed of people that it honors.

The U.S. Marine Corps Officer Selection Office, 207 West 24th Street, New York City is announcing a change in its hours of operation for this fall.

Effective October 1st and continuing through October and November, the office will be open from 8:00 A. M. to 4:00 P. M. on Saturdays in addition to the same hours on weekdays for the purpose of processing applications. Those persons who are interested in aviation programs are counseled to arrive not later than 12:00 P. M. for the purpose of completing required testing on that day.

The Return of The Visitor

Marist College is shuddering at the return of "The Visitor." She--our illustrious Madame Claire Zachanassian, has returned to our campus, but with a noticeable decline in her rage and revengeful attitude.

In fact the attitude of Carol Dzui-pan, alias Madame Zachanassian, has changed so much that she has been chosen to play the role of Emilie Duotel, a comic character in the Theatre Guild's production this fall.

I think that we will all agree that it is interesting to see how human nature changes. An excellent way to observe these changes is to enter a stranger's house and observe the family. This is fine for an angel, but it is quite unacceptable for humans.

How can we observe human behavior without being dubbed "odd"? See a play! What play would I recommend? My Three Angels! try it and see!

NOCTURNE

A new slate of officers was elected at the first meeting of the Evening Division Student Council held on September 28th. Mr. John Gallagher is the new Chairman; Mr. John Richard, Vice Chairman; Mr. Joseph Robillard, Secretary; and Mr. Roland Mellen, Treasurer. Thus these men will comprise the Executive Body of the Council.

The General Body of the Council comprises two representatives from the Major Departments in the Evening Division, plus as many at-large representatives who care to attend. Once again, an invitation goes out to any evening man who wishes to participate more closely in the affairs of Marist and its student government. Our next meeting will be held on Saturday morning, October 12th at 10:00 A. M.

Last May the Council resolved that the funds built up in the Treasury from the Activity Fee be allocated to the different departments for academic facilities improvement. Accordingly, all departments have been asked to submit proposals along these lines, which will be passed on by the Council in our next meeting.

A November dance will be sponsored by the Council. More details will be forthcoming after a committee report has been submitted.

A word of thanks to Mr. Bill Filomena, Mr. Arthur Butts, and Mr. Dominick Rinaldi for their official services over the past year.

The 1963 N. F. L. season is under way and in the East the Giants will again reign as champions, or so the writers of this article feel. In the West it is the thought of the taller half of this combo that the Bears will take over while the shorter section likes the Lions. The Giants are a sure shot if Y. A. T. remains healthy... What's so interesting about Bard College? Was it the soccer game on Wednesday, October 2?

For those of you who haven't noticed, the intercollegiate sports at Marist have been expanded to a new high of nine teams with the advents of Soccer, Freshman Basketball, and Golf.... This year the Crew is rowing in the first Fall Regatta held on the Hudson shores by Marist. The race is scheduled for Saturday, October 19th at the Marist Boathouse.... For the upper-classman who didn't pay much attention last year and for the new students in the College, the sports schedule has been enlarged for us. The teams carry the name of the school with them and are our representatives in their respective fields. Don't let them stand alone; get to the games whenever your studies allow; support your teams!... The scribes of this Spot want to extend their thanks to the praiseworthy efforts of Jim Pizzani in the organization of the intramural football program. This column would also like to express its deepest regret that John O'Neil is unable to play the games this year for Tammany Hall. Get well soon and re-join the team!

Marist Loses to Bard 10-5

AS of October 2nd, Marist no longer has its soccer team on paper; it is now a reality. On that Wednesday the Marist booters opened their official 1963 season by dropping a match to an experienced Bard College team 10-5.

Accounting for the Marist scores were a quartet of players. The little powerhouse center forward, Dean Aden, tallied a pair of goals as Ron Franks, Jim Muller and Mike Miller fired one each into the nets. On the defensive side goalie Norman Senf displayed tremendous agility as he accomplished 22 hard to get saves.
