RAILROADS L. Colds Thurs - dung 9- 1962

Tonight, we have some details on the management side - of the railroad dispute. First of all, that vital question of - money. The cost of running - the railroads. All the lines claim that they must reduce - operating costs. And they say that they can do it - by dropping superfluous jobs. Especially - the forty-one thousand firemen, who ride the trains even though they aren't needed. The saving to the railroads, if the firemen are eliminated - almost three hundred million dollars a year. And by cutting expenses connected with other jobs, the figure would rise to - a full billion dollars a year. Enough says management - to keep the trains on the tracks, and on time. And - solvent.

The unions insist that only "chaos and confusion" would result. From the anti-featherbedding regulations. To which, the companies retort. - He "chaos and confusion" unless the Brotherhoods create it, by ordering a railroad strike.

of popular resentment - Red Bulgaria. That Balkan nation, like all the Iron Curtain countries - has a crisis in agriculture.

Food - ridge in price. And - disappearing from the markets.

Housewives, in a desperate scramble - to stock their larders while they still can. Their husbands, grumbling about - government interference on the farms.

Result - a new warning from the Red regime in Sofia. Jail - for anyone who asks where the food went. The firing squad - for anyone who starts a street demonstration.

The news from Saigon - is pessimistic and optimistic.

Pessimistic, because the Red guerrillas are mounting

- "human sea" attacks. Masses of infantry, braving mine fields and machine guns - in an effort to swamp the defenders.

Ith The worst example of this kind of fanaticism - since the French were overwhelmed at Dien Bien Phu. Indicating that the battle of South Viet Nam - may indeed is be a long one.

The optimism? That's because the "human sea" attacks are being broken up. Troops of South Viet Nam, with their American military advisors - holding strong points that are virtually invulnerable. The Communist casualties - too high for any army to stand. At one point, three hundred Reds charged forward we seventy-five were killed - before they got out of with id, At least as many - wounded. So the attacking force was cut in half - hundreds of yards from their objective. The survivors, Cinding discretion the betterpert of valor Retreating running for cover.

MILITARY

Armed Services Committee unanimously approves two presidential nominations for the Armed Services.

General Maxwell Taylor to be chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. General Earle Wheeler - to be Army Chief of Staff.

a revised version of an administration bill. Which the administration telegraphs as administration telegraphs as a victory.

President Kennedy is strongly behind the line. The President and that without the U N - a nuclear war might already have broken out. And that our self-interest lies - in supporting the international organization. Hence, the administration bill - that would authorize American purchase of U N bonds.

What did the members of the House Foreign Affairs Committee - do to the measure? They tacked on - a condition.

The United States, not to buy more of the bonds - than the other nations. In other words, American knyr buyers would not bear to hold - more than half of the bonds issued by the U N.

Why is President Kennedy pleased - with the committee condition? He feels that enough U N nm bonds will be purchased by enough nations - to keep the U N functioning.

TRUMAN FOLLOW U N

President Kennedy suffered a moral defeat inside his own party.

The President criticized by the elder statesman of the Democrats - who thinks that all satellites should remain public property. Former President Truman, siding with those who apply the term "give away" - to the administration bill that would allow private control of Telstar, and its companions to come.

Tomorrow will be an historic day in the tall corn country. At the little town of West Branch, lowa, a boy was born eighty-eight years ago tomorrow. Two former Presidents of the United States will be on hand for the birthday party tomorrow in West Branch. One, the now veteran ex-President who left West Branch when he was nine years old; his worldly possessions at that time the clothes he wore and twenty cents. Herbert Hoover, of course.

His neighbor from Independence, Missouri, will be there - coming up to salute him - Harry Truman.

The new moover Presidential Library will open at West Branch tomorrow. Lewis Strauss, former head of the Atomic Energy Commission, financier, and statesman, will preside.

The people of the little town of West Branch are preparing to handle a great crowd, including some coming by special plane from both sides of the continent.

The latest shake-up in the Canadian government parallels the recent political earthquake in London. Prime Minister Diefenbaker, not so drastic - as Prime Minister MacMillan. But the aim is the same - to give the cabinet a "new look" before the next general election.

The Ottawa shuffle moves six cabinet members - into new jobs. And brings three new faces - into the inner circle around the Prime Minister. The most important switch--- controversial Ian Flemming, exchanging the finance portfolio for the justice fortpolio. Slipping into Fleming's old chair in the Finance Department- Lawyer George Nowlan, an M P from Nova Scotia.

PIRATES

Here's a story that sounds - at least a century old.

The British Navy is increasing - its anti-pirate patrol.

Could that be a reference to - the days of the Spanish Main?

Or the Nineteenth Century - when buccaneers infested the Mediterranean, from their strongholds on the Barbary Coast?

Ah no - this story carries a Nineteen Sixty Two dateline. Place - Singapore. The Royal Fleet, sending patrols
- through the coastal waters off Borneo. That's where pirates are still operating. In fact, their numbers are increasing
- because of the booming island trade. Almost every night, a freighter or a sampan is boarded - the cargo hijacked.

That's why one of the oldest commands in the history of sailing - has gone out from Singapore. The Admirals, putting more warships - on pirate patrol. The men of the Royal Navy, in pursuit of - the men of the Jolly Roger. Just as in the days of Captain Kidd - and Sir Henry Morgan.

Now, suppose you were on a beach - and a stunning brunette in a dark green bathing suit came strolling by.

Holding her hand - a little girl in a light pr pink suit.

That's what they did on the beach at Ravello - when the First Lady and Caroline arrived. The two Americans made an appropriate family picture - since most of the bathers were mothers with their children. One thing, noticeable today - the citizens of the historic medieval town are not obeying their self-denying ordinance. Told not to stare - they stared. Told not to applaud - they applauded.

Mrs. Kennedy - didn't mind. She even let the Paparazzi (Papa-ratzi) - those ubiquitous free-lance photographers -- take all the photos they wanted. They came barreling out in an overloaded launch - and had a field day snapping their lenses. Tonight, the Italian newspapers are covered with - pictures of Jacqueline and Caroline. Kennedy.

The press of the free world - not far behind.
