Good Evening, Everybody:

That earthquake in Greece seems to be likely to have consequences more startling than we dreated of. A dispatch to the Pullsburg Press this evening asserts that some geologists believe the penincula of Chalcidici may become an island. The sinking movement of the earth continues.

Shocks have been recorded ever since the violence of the first quake faced. What is more, are spreading throughout Macedonia. So one important france aftermath of this quake may be a change in the geography of old Hellas and particularly the historic repursula where the Alhemans and sparling which means that the map xxxxxx makers will have to get busy and draw new charts.

Another feature of this news is that the total

as a result of the Earthquake number of the people who have died is approaching five hundred.

As the relief workers investigate ruined buildings, they find more and more bodies.

One dispatch from Berlin today carries considerable meaning. Germany will stay away from the World Disarmament

Conference until she receives one definite assurance, That assurance must be that no power will question Germany's le treatebox on an equality with all other powers right to equal treatment. Also any agreement to disarm shall be applied to Germany equally with other powers. So said

Germany's Foreign Minister today.

GENEVA

Conference at Geneva tonight: The idea to that the world's arm should be divided into two groups. One of these in each country, there would be a police force necessary to maintain internal order. The other, would be a defense force large enough to protect each country against aggression from the outside. This suggestion was made to the World Conference today through Uncle Sam's delegate Hugh Wilson.

PONTO RICO

disastrous than previous accounts indicated. The latest figures indicates that at least three hundred people were killed and twenty-five hundred injured. According to a dispatch in the Brooklyn Times Governor Beverley estimates the property damage at anywhere from between thirty if fifty million dollars.

One of the dramatic, even tragic stories of the day, is that of the wreck of the steamer Nevada on the Pacific coast.

A dispatch to the Indianapolis Times records that the Nevada has atruck on the uninhabited island of Anatigmak in the Aleutians Tuesday night. There was a thick fog. The Nevada rammed her nose full speed into the rocks and immediately the lights went out.

For forty-eight hours the crew and passengers waited freezing on the beach. The steamer Oregon Maru appeared and tried to rescue them. After losing one of her lifeboats she abandoned the attempt. Then the Dollar Liner President Madison appeared on the scene. The was able to rescue were three men. Thirty-two seamen and seven Chinese passengers were drowned in the effort to save them.

And the death of William Robertson, the radio operator, will probably be a classic sea story for many years to come. When the Nevada crashed Robertson locked himself in his cabin. Hour after hour he continued to send messages for help. He died at his post while he was trying to repair his sending apparatus which had been broken by the pounding waves and wind.

PARLO

The Sovjet Union of Russia continues its campaign to cement friendships with other nations. If not exactly friendships, they're at least agreements not to fight. The latest can to be reported is between Russian and France. It is an agreement that neither country will commit an act of aggression against the other. It also outlaws any declaration of war between the two countries. Another clause is that "if a third power undertakes aggression against either France or Russia, the other party guarantees to maintain strict neutrality." Furthermore, each promises to refrain from propaganda against the other; also to refrain from intervening in the internal affairs of the other country.

From Rome comes the news that the Pope has issued another Encyclical against the government of Mexico. His Holiness repeated once more his protest against what he called deplorable, outrageous, wicked laws which he says oppress the liberty of the Church in Mexico.

of course, There was no ball game today because both Yankees and Cubs were on their way to Chicago for the third game. The most important news about this event is that the weather man promises ideal weather in Chicago.

Meanwhile in the little World Series at the Ruppert **Exation* Stadium in Newark, the Minneapolis Millers today won the third game. The Millers defeated the Newark Bars two to one. The game went ten innings. Each of the three runs scored was a homer. The deciding run didn't come in until the tenth inning. This gives Minneapolis a lead of two to one over Newark.

WALKER

(9)

The name of the popular and flamboyant ex-Mayor

Jimmie Walker of New York cropped up in the headlines again today. This as a result of a decision of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court which reversed the opinion of the lower court. That means, the Appellate Division considers that an election for mayor of New York should be held November 8th. The case still has to come before the Court of Appeals, which is the court of last resort in New York & State.

All this sets the political pot boiling furiously in New York City. It may mean an open declaration of war on the Tammany tiger by Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt.

It seems to be definitely decided that if New York must vote for a mayor November 8th, Tammany will put up the gay and gaily clad Jimmie for election. His chief opponent will be the present acting mayor, Judge Joe McKee.

The details of what this implies in New York

very much, except in so far as it means a terrific in the Empire

State with Governor Roosevelt milities one end of the rope.

ADD WALKER

The news of this decision evidently put new life into Mayor Jimmie. A dispatch from the new Italian liner, the Rex, at Gibraltar, brings the information that the Beneration

— and a twitter—

Jimmie is on his toes over the prospect of running for re-election in November.

RACE

Where was the first man born? Where did the human race originate? The question, Scientists all over the world have been trying to answer it for several thousand years.

A dispatch from Rome to the Cleveland Press today says that there's a professor who thinks he's discovered the secret. He is Professor Leo Probenius - that's a nice monaker - Professor Probenius of the University of Frankfut.

The news came out because Professor Probenius had an interview

today with Premier Mussolini, Il Duce himself. Professor Probenius was received by the august one on his return from a long property of exploration in Africa.

Well, the dope is, according to Professor Probenius,

The Professor Probenius arrived at this conclusion because he found traces at Fezzan in the Italian Province of Tripoli, which were 14,000 years old. In that part of Africa there used to be primitive men who worshipped the sun and killed their own kings in religious ceremonies. It was a not idea being a king in those days, but it wasn't healthy.

When a man does some one great spectacular feat that startles the world, his name usually is in the headlines, work after And then -- what becomes of him? Back in 1924 four crack flyers of the United States Army Air Service made the first circumnavigation of the globe by air. They were hailed as the Magellans of the skies. One was Captain Lowell Smith. Another, Lieutenant Les Arnold. Also Lieutenant Erick Nelson, and Smiling Jack Harding from Tennessee. Well, I ran into one of the world fliers today, Leslie Arnold. He is now one of the executives of Transcontinental and Western Air, the so-called "Lindbergh Line" that has planes shooting back and forth on regular schedule from coast to coast. I asked him how the depression was affecting aviation, and he replied that the passengers air lines were carrying more passengers than ever before, during the past three months had broken all records. further bear this out he added that TWA, the Lindbergh Line, is starting a new daily service tomorrow between Detroit and Indianapolis. The primary purpose of this is to enable Detroiters to make the trip to Los Angeles in twenty-four hours.

Obcyesocando Acencountered canother cytoomechaser chadey,

Oh yes, and I encountered another gloom chaser today, a gentleman whom I suppose you have all seen many times on the But you wouldn't recognize him if you met him in person, because he doesn't wear those celebrated horn-rimmed glasses. * mean Harold Lloyd. He sails tonight for Europe to study the latest developments in continental motion picture technique, and also to witness the uncanny phenomena of German, French, Italian, yes and Scandinavian sounds, emitting from his own lips. He told me that they take an American film, and "dub in" as they call it, the sound of a foreign language spoken by some one else, so perfectly that, why, you'd think Harold Lloyd himself spoke every one of the languages used at the Tower of Babel.

And If you don't think Harold Lloyd is an antidote for the Read times jak just try and keep a straight face while you are watching that latest film of his. Movie Crazy. Ilaughted

I laughed and laughed, well, just as heartily as I did last night when I exploded wih laughter and couldn't even say So Long.

FLOUD

A severe flood reported from Northern Mexico.

In fact, a dispatch to the Washington Daily News declares that it's the most disastrous flood in the history of that region. Several small villages were entirely swept away.

At least seven lives were reported lost. All traffic is paralyzed between Mexico City and Juarez, which is right across the Rio Grande from El Paso, The telegraph wires between Juarez and the interior are down.

Here's a hien little story about a policeman.

Patrolman Bill Whittacker of Union, New Jersey, was called out today to chase a gang of five bandits. He took his official car and scooted as fast as it could go for Springfield, New Jersey. As he went through Springfield several of the coppers of that town jumped on his running board to help.
The bandits' car was in sight by this time. As they got outside Springfield they abandoned their motor and ran into a wood.
Patrolman Whittacker and his Springfield helpers went after them.
Just as they were on the point of saying: "Throw up your hands"
they heard a motor start, back on the road.

They beat it as fast as they could for the road. When they got there the bandits were gone; So was the police car. — --

FUNDRAL

It isn't often that I let a story of a funeral get into this broadcast - but don't be afraid. This is not gloomy.

It the tale of a funeral which was postponed because, as the story in the New York World Telegram says - the - corpse - was - indisposed.

A Mr. Sullivan, 42 years old, left his home in Brooklyn July 25th, after bidding his wife a fond farewell. Mr. Sullivan did not return on the evening of July 25th, nor on the evening of July 26th, nor on any subsequent evenings whatsoever. In short, Mr. Sullivan just didn't return at all.

Last month Mrs. Sullivan read in a newspaper that a body of a drowned man had been taken to the morgue at the Bellevue hospital. In the dead man's pocket was a union card bearing the name of Daniel Sullivan. So Mr. Sullivan's sister identified the body as that of her brother. So did several friends. So did also Mrs. Sullivan. All arrangements were made to hold the funeral services today.

Then, says the story in the World Telegram, Mrs.

Sullivan urged Mr. Sullivan to come home. Mr. Sullivan, and again I am quoting the World Telegram - Mr. Sullivan preferred what diplomats call the status quo. In short, Mr. Sullivan said lave things as they is."

Mrs. Sullivan sought the police lieutenant and begged him to please do something about it because it was going to be such a nice funeral. Said the lieutenant:

"Lady, I'm sorry, there's nothing in the laws of New York by which you can punish a man because he ain't dead." Here's a chaste item to which I'm indebted to my friends on the Jersey City Journal. And it's quite an amusing illustration of life in our courts of law.

William F. Clifton of Harrison, N.J., has been on a petty jury in the Hudson County Court House. His two weeks' service would be up tonight. He has sat in a number of In those two weeks he has been a juror in a number of cases.

It was discovered today that he has not been able to hear one single word of all that was said at any of the trials on which he has served. The gentleman has been deaf for several years.

Here's a little thrift story for you. It comes from Spain, Madrid, in a dispatch to the Newark News.

A couple of Amherst graduates attended the International Radio Telegraphic Conference in Madrid. One evening they decided to form the Amherst Club of Madrid, and hold the first annual dinner at the Palace Hotel.

They realized that nothing would make the perfect that celebrated amheration but a message from ex-President Calvin Coolidge. So they sent a long cable to Mr. Coolidge asking him to send them a suitable message of greeting. Knowing Mr. Coolidge's record habits they informed him that as delegates to the conference they had the privilege of sending free messages from Spain to the United States, also getting free replies, they hinted that Mr. Coolidge need not spare any words for economy's sake.

There were speeches humorous, there and speeches sentimental, there were songs rendered with gusto. But the big moment was the reading of the message from Mr. Coolidge.

But let me look at the time, I mustn't make this broadcast too long. Oh well, after all, it's a message from

So perhaps I'd better read every single word of it.
an ex-President. So Here is Mr. Coolidge's message to the first annual dinner of the Amherst Club of Madrid, It reads as follows:

"Greetings."

Well, Mr. Coolidge teaches me a lesson in thrift nothing more to say don't say it. So Ill sust I can't compress what I want to say into one word, but at least I can say s - 1 - u - t - Monday.
