Steve (or Hugh as I remember you)

We lost touch over the last two decades, but I want you to know what a great job you did at Marist College for the young student Brothers. It was a time of turmoil, and you handled a difficult situation gracefully.

Knowing you handled that situation so nicely, I don't doubt that your subsequent activities in education were just as caring and rewarding to the many persons you touched in vital times of their lives.

I believe that Stephen Sheridan was Brother Hugh Ephrem. If so, he was my freshman homeroom teacher at St. Ann's in 1952. As I lived in Jackson Heights the town next to Woodside, I still recall how excited I was to see my teacher walking with his parents in my neighborhood on a Sunday afternoon. I believe he also taught me French. Unfortunately, I am now in California getting ready to teach my first course at Chapman University. All the good things that I learned from the Brothers and as a Brother myself stay with me.
