From Cyprus .....

From Washington ....

From Margarita Island, Venezuela comes today's news.

Good Evening Everybody. This Lowell Thomas.

Turkish forces on Cyprus launched a wide offensive today - and by the time a partial cease-fire went into effect at sundown - the Turks had virtually partitioned the island in two; apparently accomplishing by force of arms what they failed to achieve at the Geneva peace talks. American built Turkish jets bombed the industrial section of Nicosia into smoking ruins - another bombing attack near Larnaca killed three Austrian soldiers - members of the UN peace heeping force.

The lightning offensive brought Greece and Turkey to the brink of full-scale war - with Greece announcing the withdrawal of its military forces from the Nato Alliance.

Both Greece and Turkey are members of Nato - the Greeks now claiming Nato did little to stop the current Turkish military operations on the island. However, the Greeks say they will continue as a political member of Nato - which may indicate a possible future return within the Alliance. Should Greece continue to with-hold its military forces from Nato it would mean the loss of several naval bases and air force installations, both American and British - on the Greek mainland and the island of Crete - vital to Nato's southeastern flank.

In Washington, President Ford met with Secretary

Kissinger and later the President telephoned British

Prime Minister Harold Wilson urging him to do everything possible to resolve the crisis. State Department officials indicated that all

US military aide to both Greece and Turkey would be cut off should those countries go to war.

In London, Archbishop Makarios - ousted President of Cyprus, was blaming the United States for having failed to prevent the Turkish invastion with diplomatic pressure.

The crisis over Cyprus may delay the President's decision on a Vice President until after the coming weekend. Meanwhile, members of the House and Senate - are in effect - "voting" for their candidate for the Vice Presidential post, They are sending sealed envelopes to the President listing their choices in one two three order. The word from Capitol Hill is that conservatives are pushing G O P national chairman George Bush and the liberals are backing Nelson Rockefeller.

The White House announced that the President will visit Japan later this year. Probably after the November elections. He will be the first US President to visit be Japan while in office.

At a White House meeting the President told a group of fifteen state seasons governors that he subble enthusiastically supports federal revenue sharing - and favors its renewal when current legislation expires next year. The exchange of views, also with by city wayors, cies, touched on the inflation problem -a problem which Treasury Secretary William Simon says won't go away for at least two years. It'll take that long, or longer - he says - to drive inflation down to "acceptable levels."

Budget Director Roy Ash says the President's propose proposal to reactivate the cost of living council is intended - not as a sent step toward controls - but rather as a way of avoiding them.

In Detroit, the four US auto makers report auto sales early this month are up more than two percent over the same period last year. Also, public works committees in both the House and Senate are pushing legislation that would allow bigger and -- and wider -- trucks to use the interstate highway system.

STORM PLANE

Tropical Storm Alma swept along the Venezuela coast today and is blamed for an airline crash that took forty-seven lives. Only the co-pilot Juan Magallanes - survived. The Venezuelan airliner, flying blind through rain and wind, ran into a mountain.

The Interior Department says the Black Hills of South Dakota may have rich gold deposits waiting to be discovered, by exterprising prospectors. Department spokesman Dr. James Norton says the northern Black Hills, in the vicinity of the town of with gold now things 150 Dellas or Lead, are particularly worthy of attention .- All but two gold mines in the area have been closed for more than thirty years and do many have not been Homestake - still going strong.

and now this muss

Hundreds of sharks are reported in the shallow waters off the beaches at St. Petersburg, Florida, with bathers warned to stay on the beach. The sharks apparently were driven toward the shore by an outbreak of what is known as the Red Tide, a micro-organism sea invasion which paralizes fish.
