

LT BUICK, FISHER, TUESDAY, JANUARY 26, 1965

PRESIDENT

President Johnson left Bethesda Naval Hospital today, apparently fully recovered from the cold and sore throat that had kept him bed-ridden for four days. But the President was scarcely back in the White House before he received a political jolt. .

In the first legislative test of the eighty-ninth Congress, the House took a slap at Administration foreign policy. Disregarding the pleas of Democratic leaders, the House voted an immediate embargo on the sale of surplus foods to the United Arab Republic. Congressional reaction to recent anti-U.S. outbursts in Cairo. The curb was written into an emergency one-point-six-billion dollar money bill for continued farm price supports. If the Senate concurs, the measure will stop surplus food sales to the U.A.R. at least through July the first.

SECRET

Two U.S. diplomats have been charged with spying in the Soviet Union. Richard F. Stolz, First Secretary of the U.S. Embassy in Moscow, was ordered to leave the country within a week. The other, Kenneth A. Kerst, Stolz's predecessor in the Moscow Embassy post. Kerst, returned to Washington in November, but is now barred from ever going back.

According to the Kremlin, the two diplomats were guilty of "criminal espionage" in partnership with a Soviet national, identified only as Citizen "B". However, U.S. authorities termed the expulsion another example of the diplomatic "numbers game", in retaliation for the recent American ouster of a Soviet diplomat. The Russian - Boris V. Karpovich, senior Soviet Information Officer in Washington - was expelled from this country on January seventh. He was charged with spying on the U.S. in 1959 while working for the United Nations.

UNITED NATIONS

In the United Nations, U.S. Ambassador Adlai Stevenson told the General Assembly that it must decide whether or not to preserve an effective U.N. He told the Assembly that it cannot afford a "double standard" that would permit the Soviets to escape payment of their legal peace-keeping obligations. "Our world", he said, "would become not a safer, but a more dangerous place for us all".

Tuesday, Jan. 26 --

READ IN LOWELL THOMAS INSERT on 6:15.

Today's report from Lowell Thomas is again from East Africa, where he's following the trail of Big Game -- and small. Lowell.

NEWS 2:25

QUOTE: "So long."

STONES

The Ngorongoro is an extinct volcanic area, a vast crater from ten to twelve miles in diameter. The floor of it covers over a hundred square miles. Of all the spectacular places in Africa where you can see the fabulous wildlife of this continent, the Ngorongoro Crater is probably best of all - that and the Serengeti Plain. Tens of thousands of animals live here on the floor of the crater, live and die here, and never never climb out of it.

It's an ideal place for big game, that is, all except the giraffe. They never come to the crater. In the Ngorongoro you will find almost all the other animals of the continent. Today as we roamed the floor of the Ngorongoro Crater here is a list of the wildlife we saw, all around us -- much of it extremely close to us. The graceful Thompson's gazelle, the Grant's gazelle which is

NGORONGORO CRATER

GOOD EVENING EVERYBODY:

I suspect we had the climax of our trip into the African big game country, today. For years and years I had been hoping to get a look at the Ngorongoro Crater. I first heard about this fabulous crater some forty years ago from Martin and Osa Johnson, and also from their predecessor in Kenya and Tanganyika, an English artist and cameraman, Major Arthur Radclyffe Dugmore, whose biography I wrote long long ago. I called it ROLLING STONE.

The Ngorongoro is an extinct volcanic area, a vast crater from ten to twelve miles in diameter. The floor of it covers over a hundred square miles. Of all the spectacular places in Africa where you can see the fabulous wildlife of this continent, the Ngorongoro Crater is probably best of all - that and the Serengeti Plain. Tens of thousands of animals live here on the floor of the crater, live and die here; and never never climb out of it.

It's an ideal place for big game, that is, all except the griaffe. They never come to the crater. In the Ngorongoro you will find almost all the other animals of the continent. Today as we roamed the floor of the Ngorongoro Crater here is a list of the wildlife we saw, all around us -- much of it extremely close to us. The graceful Thompson's gazelle, the Grant's gazelle which is a little larger, the Impala, the Gnu, the cross-word puzzle animal. Nearly everybody out here calls it the wildebeeste. We saw them by the thousands. Also thousands and thousands of pink flamingo, and in the same lake, on the floor of the crater, hippopotamus. Here and there we saw jackals and hyenas. Occasionally we met that prehistoric monster the rhinoceros. Also, the eland, the largest of the antelope family, rare, and the tiny dik-dik, which is the smallest of them all, lion too and elephant, and so on and so on.

For a companion today we had a tall, third generation East African named Chris Roberts, who remarked that if he were to be reincarnated, and had his choice, he'd like to be a male lion, living in the Ngorongoro Crater, surrounded by all these other animals.

Solong.....

VIET NAM

IN South Viet Nam, a seventeen-year-old Buddhist girl burned herself to death in protest against the government. In Hue, more Buddhist-inspired riots that threatened the U.S. Consulate. And in Saigon, two terrorist bombs were detonated ten minutes apart in the annex to American military headquarters.

In Washington, however, little immediate concern for the future of the Juong government. There, Central Intelligence Director John A. McCone, testified for two hours before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. Later, Senator J. William Fulbright termed the situation in South Viet Nam "very distressing." But he added: "I don't see any signs of another coup."

KHRUSHCHEV

In days to come, the young Russian student may have to ask a seemingly ridiculous question like - "Nikita Khrushchev? Who was he?" Here's why.

The latest Russian textbook on Soviet history is just off the presses, and in it the former Soviet premier is virtually the forgotten man. The book was authorized six weeks after Khrushchev was ousted from office. Accordingly, it lists his wartime activities very briefly, then records his election as leader of the Communist party in nineteen fifty-three. But after that, nothing.

The book does endorse Khrushchev's de-Stalinization of Russia. It also records his major political doctrines such as peaceful co-existence and the non-inevitability of war. But these innovations are now attributed to the Communist Central Committee.

CHEATING

According to the Party line, Khrushchev is simply the little man who wasn't there.

Six more cadets have resigned from the U.S. Air Force Academy in the growing cheating scandal.

That raises to thirty-five the total number of cadets who have quit the service school since the cheating investigation began eight days ago.

The new resignations were disclosed by Major General Robert H. Warren, Superintendent of the Academy. General Warren added that the investigation was continuing and might be completed by February tenth.

CHEATING

British soldiers, sailors and airmen staged a solemn, silent dress rehearsal today of the pomp and ceremony that will mark the funeral of Sir Winston Churchill.

Six more cadets have resigned from the U.S. Air Force Academy in the growing cheating scandal. That raises to thirty-five the total number of cadets who have quit the service school since the cheating investigation began eight days ago.

The new resignations were disclosed by Major General Robert H. Warren, Superintendent of the Academy. General Warren added that the investigation was continuing and might be completed by February tenth.

Many of those caught in traffic were angered at first - until they learned the reason. Said one truck driver, "They might have told us". But he added quietly that for Churchill, "I don't mind waiting". That's news at L.T. would say.

CHURCHILL

British soldiers, sailors and airmen staged a solemn, silent dress rehearsal today of the pomp and ceremony that will mark the funeral of Sir Winston Churchill.

Paced to the boom of a bass drum, shrouded in black, the servicemen drew a funeral caisson from Westminster Hall, to St. Paul's Cathedral, then on to Tower Pier.

Unfortunately, the rehearsal began late and ran into a massive rush hour traffic jam in London's financial district. Police were forced to resort to radio cars, motorcycles and walkie-talkies in an effort to break through.

Many of those caught in traffic were angered at first - until they learned the reason. Said one truck driver, "They might have told us". But he added quietly that for Churchill, "I don't mind waiting". That's news - at L.T. would say.