President Kennedy, as you no doubt know - is back in Washington for one of the lively moments in the nation's political life. The opening of - a new session of Congress. The Eighty-eighth - to begin deliberations tomorrow. The Congressional bipartisan leadership, meeting at the White House today - for a briefing on world affairs by the President.

Tonight, a rather different occasion - for John and Jacqueline Kennedy. The President and First Lady, at the National Gallery - to present the First Lady of Art; The "Mona Lisa," which smiles as mysteriously tonight ^{as she has been doing now for} ~~as it did~~ four hundred years ago, ^{when since} Leonardo deVinci ^{finished the last stroke of ~~the brush.~~} ^{his}
