Mar. Jan. 7-94. Denner

TIME FOLLOW ENERGY

Meanwhile, millions of Americans, young and old - were going to - UA You swrely know school and to work today in the dark. The nation, returning to winter-time daylight savings time - for the first time since World War Two.

ENERGY

On the energy front - an attempt today to prevent the hoarding of fuel supplies. The Federal Energy Office - sending identical telegrams to thirty-two major trucking companies; demanding a full accounting - "of present inventories of diesel fuel and gasoline."

It was also disclosed that a similar check has already begun in the railroad industry. The Energy Office saying it "urgently needs" this information - "in order to fairly administer the mandatory fuel allocation program."

STOCKHOLM FOLLOW TIME

Overseas - gas rationing began at midnight tonight in Sweden; the first Western nation forced to take such a step is since the start of the Arab oil freeze. From now through the end of February -Will the Swedish motorists getting only twenty-six gallons a piece.

In addition, a twenty per cent cut in central heating - in all Swedish apartments and offices. The Government is also planning to ration hot water - by turning it off and on intermittantly a week at a time.

TOKYO FOLLOW STOCKHOLM

Half a world away In Tokyo - the once mighty Japanese yen was taking another beating today; dropping seven per cent - vis-a-vis the American dollar; its third such decline - since early November. This the result of runaway inflation - largely fed by the current oil shortage.

The U.S. dollar was also soaring to new highs today - on the money markets of Western Europe; again - a result of the energy crisis. This way about the way - a boon to U.S. tourists and Americans working abroad.

VIENNA FOLLOW TOKYO

At the same time - in Vienna - a meeting of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries consider a Venezuelan proposal Hthat major producing and consuming nations should work together to solve the energy crisis.

Venezuela's Hugo Perez La Salvia saying: "Energy is a matter for all mankind - and should be dealt with by governments, not by oil companies." He also expressed confidence that the OPEC partners will sit down to talks with the U.S., Japan and Europe. GENEVA

Egyptian and Israeli peace envoys - met again today in Geneva. This Their fifth session Ending with a joint statement - the briefest and least informative since the talks began. The two sides saying only that - "disengagement talks were continued;" and another k session # set for Monday.

This coming as something of a surprise - in as much as Israel was reportedly planning to offer a new withdrawl plan. An Egyptian spokesman later saying, indeed "there were no new proposals." A game warden at Lion Country Safari, the popular Florida game preserve - was trampled and gored to death today by a four thousand pound water buffalo. Sixty-year-old Michael Gallop attempting to shoo the animal away from an open gate - when he was suddenly attacked. All in plain view of a Virginia couple and their four children 4 waiting to enter the preserve. A spokesman later saying the water buffalo may have been agitated at having just become a new father. HOUSE

Key members of the House Judiciary Committee were briefed today by Committee counsel - on the Progress thus far in mounting an impeachment inquiry. Committee Chairman Peter Rodino later saying: "We are satisfied that the preliminary stages of the inquiry - are going satisfactorily." Adding that a full report can be expected -"sometime in the latter part of April or thereabouts." MIAMI

Newly-freed Bernard Barker was discussing today - his role in the infamous Watergate break-in. Barker saying his sole purpose was to get proof - "that the Castro government was giving money to the Democrats." "What's so strange" - he asked - "about them giving money to a party - which they believe would serve their interest better than the other party?" WASHINGTON FOLLOW MIAMI

Meanwhile Back in Washington - three Cuban-Americans convicted along with Barker, H today were granted paroles effective March seventh. These including Eugenio Martinez - Frank Sturgis - and Virgilio Gonzalez;

all of whom - originally sentenced to four years for burglary, wiretapping and consipracy.

SAIGON

President Thieu of South Vietnam today placed his army - on "highest alert." This to guard against the possibility - of a new Communist offensive; timed to coincide either with the Tet lunar new year two weeks hence - or the first anniversary of the Paris peace agreement a few days later. Thieu telling his troops that "utmost security - must be maintained."

PHNOM PENH FOLLOW SAIGON

In neighboring Cambodia - scores of civilians were killed today in fierce fighting near Phnom Penh's Pochentong airport. Enemy rocket fire on the airport itself - was also threatening to cut off Cambodia from all international air traffic.

AIRPORTS

Heavily armed soldiers and paramilitary police were guarding major airports today - throughout Europe. This in the face of reports that Arab terrorists armed with Soviet surface-to-air missiles were planning to take a shot at a commercial jetliner.

The same security measures - were also in effect today in Canada. An Ottawa spokesman saying: "When everyone else tightens up, we tighten up,- we live in an international community." MOSCOW

Christmas in Moscow. The Kremlin is opposed - the Soviet Union #* officially atheistic. But still - the observance goes on. Tens of thousands of worshipers - most of them elderly women - today werl jamming the city's forty-five Russian Orthodox churches, celebrating the birth of Christ A according to the pre-Revolutionary Julian calendar.

If past performance is any guide - similar services were also were held throughout Russia. As in Moscow, bearded priests painting tiny crosses - on worshipers foreheads; crosses which many erased as soon as they left the church. Christmas in Russia - an act of faith, an act of courage. MOUNT ALYESKA

An invasion of Japanese skiers - is reported today from Near Portage Blacer and Ruchordge Mount Alyeska, in Alaska. The Japanese arriving in chartered planes - about a thousand a week; preferring the practically guaranteed snow conditions in Alaska - to taking pot-luck on their own crowded slopes. Chris von Imhof of Mount Alyeska cherving, saying "They're the most fun-loving and hospitable people - that we accomodate."

EARTH ORBIT

From the men at Skylab Three - a list of the things they miss most in their eighth week in orbit: these including radio and TV for relaxing - candy and peanuts to snack on - a washer and dryer to enable them to change clothes more often - better soap and shaving gear - more windows to better view the Universe - and more time to think.

But most of all - they miss their families. Jerry Carr, for one, saying: "I miss watching football - with my family; and I miss a good cold can of beer - while I'm watching the game." And so it goes - in the loneliness of space. A new super-glue called "Cyano-Acryloic" - is the subject of a warning today from the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission. Cyano-Acryloic - which was originally developed for use in surgery now sold under several brand names. Perhaps a million tubes now on the market.

What's wrong with it? Commission Chairman Richard Simpson saying - it's simply "too good." The new super-glue - said to have bonded together the fingers of some who have used it; also, bonding their fingers to other parts of their bodies - to the point where they needed medical help to get free. Simpson noting that this is one glue - that will truly glue "almost anything to anything."

anyone your like to be glued to ? da-l-

GLUE