L.T.-- BUICK, FISHER. MONDAY DECEMBER 14, 1964

GOOD EVENING EVERYBODY:

From Washington today -- another landmark decision in the continuing struggle for Civil Rights. The Supreme Court stamping unanimous approval -- on the public accommodations section of the new Civil Rights Law. And following that -- a five-to-four decision that frees thousands of sit-in demonstrators from the threat of prosecution -- even if they were arrested before the law went into effect.

At stake in the first case -- was this question: Does Congress have the Constitutional right to bar racial discriminata by motels, hotels and restaurants engaged in interstate commerce? The Supreme Court's answer: It does. The Court ruling that discrimination by such establishments does -- in fact -- impede interstate travel. S_ying, what's more, that the more to apply the law to businesses engaged in essentially local patronage -was "plainly appropriate."

LEAD -- 2

The second decision -- something of a surprise. It involved demonstrators arrested in Nineteen Sixty -- four years before passage of the new Civil Rights law. The Supreme Court holding that the laws under which the demonstrators were arrested -- although legally applicable in Nineteen Sixty -- are in direct conflict with theCivil Rights Act of Nineteen Sixty-Four. The Supreme Court summing up its findings in these words: The Civil Rights Act. "is in me no violation of any express limitations of the Constitution and we therefore declare it valid." A landmarkand the second second indeed.

CRAB

Here's something you don't see every day -- an international agreement between the United States and Russia. The subject -- a seafood delicacy known as King Crab -- and found off the Alaskan coast.

Lowell, Jr. once made a conventer about the Alaskan King Crab -- which you may have seen. The problem then and now -- one of diverging ideologies. The Americans trapping the King Crab in sinking pots -- dropped from buoys. The Russians dragging the same areas with nets -- frequently fouling both the American and Russian gear.

But today's agreement hopefully ends all that -establishing specific areas off Kodiak Island -- where the U.S. will have the right-of-way -- from July through October. For the American and Soviet fishermen off Alaska -- peaceful co-existence.

DIPLOMATS

Another dispatch tonight -- not nearly so pleasant -connects our national capital -- with Siberia.

Subject -- those four Western diplomats who were on their way to the Tokyo Olympics. Nigel Laville -- of Britain; George Aubrey, Karl Liewer and James Smith -- of the U.S.A. They decided to travel -- together; and put up in the same room -- at a hotel in Khabarovsk.

They were unpacking -- when suddenly the door burst open. A band of Soviet agents -- invading the room. Ordering the diplomats back against the wall -- at the point of a gun. The -- ransacking their belongings.

All the Soviet agents found were some photographs of the type -- that tourists take anywhere. That is -- anywhere in the West. Behind the Iron Curtain -- that's another matter. Result -- the four Westerners were accused of espionage. But the Soviets apparently weren't too sure of the evidence -- because they allowed their prisoners to return to the two Moscow Embassien

DIPLOMATS - 2

Both London and Washington kept them on duty to make clear -- the diplomatic legitimacy of the four men. But the Russians have Russians have been hampering them -- in their duties. And so, all four -- are now recalled.

In retaliation, four Russians -- are getting the boot. One, attached to the Soviet Embassy -- in London. Three, at the Soviet Embassy in Washington.

The end of the weird story that began in Khabarovsk.in Siberia.

INDIANA - AFRICA

Indiana, Pennsylvania, you may have heard of for two reasons. One--it's the site of a college--that has turned out some crack basketball teams. And it's the Christmas Tree Capital of the World. Tonight in the news for both reasons. All a part of a "Marathon Run--for Operation Friendship." The young college students--boys and girls alike--running around a town block in relays. The goal--to run one thousand one hundred miles by Wednesday. And to collect enough money in the processto finance a medical clinic in the African village of --Umanachi, Nigeria. The Christmas tree? Oh, yes. When one runner gets tired -- he passes the baton on to the next boy or girl in line. And the baton--is a Christmas tree.

But from Africa itself comes more somber news-for this or any other season. In the Congo--more than twenty thousand persons caughtered by the rebels. Most of them Congolese--including five thousand in Stanleyville alone. Stanleyville--where more than fifty whites also lost their

ISRAEL

In Israel -- there's another political crisis tonight. And with it -- a reminder of the celebrated "Lavon Affair" of ten years ago. Prime Minister Levi Eshkol resigning -- in the face of bitter opposition from former Premier David Ben-Gurion. The elder statesman-demanding a full investigation into the activities of Pinhas Lavon--one-time Minister of Defense. The Prime Ministerrefusing to reopen the case. Also refusing Ben Gurion's demand - that he advance younger men--into positions of authority.

REDHEAD

Here's one about the redhead and the bachelors-all one hundred and fifty of them--in the remote out back mining town of Tennant Creek, Australia.

It all started when Diane McNeice--a statuesque, twenty-one-year-old, redhead--read about those lonesome miners. It seems that Diane had a vacation coming up -and she wanted to do something different this year--so she did. She volunteered to spend her three weeks with the miners of Tennant Creek--and the offer was promptly accepted.

Next, there was a riotous welcome--and since then, dances and parties every night. Followed by turkey shoots an folowe -picking forays--in the daylight hours. By Saturday night-- the town's two bars running out of champagne, but Diane never missing a dance--never missing a step. In fact, cutting such a striking figure--that even some of the married men in town --began to look.

REDHEAD - 2

That did it. The wives of the non bachellors up in arm -- banding together to advertise for a guest of their own. Specifying only that he be -- tall, dark and handsome -- like you Dick. Their ingleader saying this: "If we find the right man, we'll kill him with kindness."
