Good Evening Everybody: Henry Kissinger - freshly back from Peking - briefed President Nixon this morning - on his trip - and later relayed some of his findings - to White House newsmen. The President - he said - will make that historic journey to Peking - early in the new year - just when:
- will be announced within the next month or so.

Kissinger expressed a hope that that trip will provide an opportunity to make a new beginning in relations with mainland China - a trip - he said - intended to end the isolation from each other of two great people.

But from Paris - a note of what sounded like sour grapes - or a plague on both your houses - from Russia's party Chief Brezhnev - who accused the United States of intriguing - with Red China - behind the backs of the Wietnamese people to settle the Vietnam War. Brezhnev - thought wasn't very well briefed on Henry Kissinger's remarks in Washington. Kissinger said - Vietnam will NOT be one of the subjects to be discussed by President Nixon in Peking. Said Kissinger - we expect to settle the Vietnam War either through unilateral action - or through negotiation - not through Peking.

In the wake of Nationalist China's expulsion from the United Nations - a series of continuing shock waves today; not the least of which - was an unprecedented White House statement.

President Nixon quoted as saying - he was "shocked and dismayed;" especially at the "undisguised glee of some U.N. delegates" - at the final outcome. The President is said to believe that such action - is "not worthy of an international forum;" further, that it "could very seriously impair support for the U.N." - in the U.S. Congress and the country as a whole.

White House News Secretary Ron Ziegler also noted that several of the delegates in question - represented countries to which the U.S. "has been very generous." Adding that this in itself - could well affect future foreign aid

A coalition of three opposition parties in the Japanese Diet - attempted to force the ouster of Japan's

Prime Minister Sato; charging that Sato had bowed to U.S.

pressure in a "humiliating way" - on the China question, on recent economic issues, on Okinawa.

This - led to two motions of no confidence; both of which
- were easily defeated. Political observers contend, however, that Japan is left with no recourse - except to attempt a reconcilation with Peking; a move that Sato - himself - has said he could never undertake.

From the White House - a final go-ahead from President Nixon; clearing the way for that big controversial:

underground nuclear test - scheduled to take place at Alaska's,

Amchitka Island.

Chairman James Schlesinger of the Atomic Energy

Commission later said: "We expect to be in a readiness state to detonate - within a week." Schlesinger adding that objections to the test - based on environmental grounds had been given "careful consideration." In the end though said he - "overriding requirement of national security have,

of necessity, taken precedence."

From Katmandu in Nepal - near the "roof of the world" - the story of a Japanese mountain-climbing expedition; going up - a complete success; but coming back - a disaster.

The way it happened - a pair of Japanese climbers and their Sherpa guide - successfully scaled Gangapurna Himal. This a remote Himalayan peak - reaching an altitude of more than twenty-four thousand feet. Heading down though - the mountaineers discovered an avalanche had just wiped out their base camp; killing a support party of six - including three Japanese and three Sherpas.

And the next day - at a lower base camp - still another tragedy; two more Japanese lost their lives - when they stumbled into a crevice.

Gangapurna Himal claiming eight victims, in all - simply because "it was there."

CASEY

Hello Everybody: From London tonight - I wonder if you remember a small boy who did several broadcasts years and years ago? Casey Murrow - the son of Edward R.!
Murrow? Well, he's now a grown man, married and an authority on education - or almost that. And he tells us that there is a current crisis in education - right around the world.

It'a a problem, of course, that concerns every thinking American. Now we get a new insight into it - through a book entitled "CHILDREN COME FIRST" by Casey Murrow and his wife Liza.

For more than a year the Casey Murrows have been studying the techniques of progressive education - over here and in the British Isles; and they have come to the conclusion that children blossom best in an informal setting, unfettered by rigid rules - where teachers serve mainly as observers.

That sounds like magic. To make sure that a child's work is productive - and, in the long run, balanced; all of which they say - creates what they call "a learning condition;"

making it a pleasure rather than a chore - with almost no bordom, no discontent - almost never. And what is taking place in England - they say - "is not a system that is easily imported." But they add that "with careful thought" some aspects of the work in the English schools over here" can be applied to our schools in the United States." "CHILDREN

COME FIRST," by Casey Murrow and his bride - a new prescription for learning. So long.

Thank you, Lowell.

At that world synod of bishops at the Vatican - a charge today that Pope Paul is suffering from a communications gap. This - we are told - the result of stilted, obscure and complex language - in the dozens of documents that go out in the Pope's name every year; instead of making his views "clear and intelligible," as they should - often leaving grave doubts as to just what he means.

Case in point - the report goes on: A Vatican document - seven years in preparation; when it was finally made public - it went virtually unread anywhere but Rome;

its message - thus falling on deaf ears. And worst of all - we are told - this particular document was addressed specifically to the mass media.

Now for Lowell Thomas, this is Allen Jackson saying Good Night.
