Good Evening, Everybody:

In old dispute between Texas and Arkansas seems to be in danger of flaring up again.

Ind was still theirs, but the Texans point out that the River remains the boundary between the two states which makes the disputed land a part of the Lone star state. The disputed has been cropping up on and off ever since. Not so long ago occurred what was called a Battle of Bridges in which Texas and Arkansas had a row about the bridges across the Red River, and now Texas seems to be taking up a strong position by locating the headquarters of the Texas Rangers on the disputed 4600 acresthat constitute the apple of this southwestern discord.

Near Hamilton, Ontario, hundreds of farmers are standing on guard these days. These farmers are frightened and angry. They are armed with pitchforks, scythes, and shotguns. They are protecting their barns.

Posses of men have been searching the countryside for the maniac. The farmers are afraid to keep their livestock in the barns, for fear of fire, and they are standing guard, ready to greatly manager both barries.

And now comes what seems to be a case of rough on kidnappers.

Four men were sentenced in New York today to sixty & years a piece in prison. And those are long terms. They are getting the heavy dose for a recent sensational kidnapping case.

Charles M. Rosenthal, a New Yorker, was kidnapped and held for two weeks. His family paid a large ransom to get him out, and that swift, as the International News Service tells us, the judge said today: "It will be sixty years apiece" for you four men the sentence will be sixty years."

But the chicago the Judge didn't have anything to say to Scarface Al Capone today. His Honor was scheduled to pronounce sentence on the Big Shot, but that has been put off until tomor row.

The International News Service explains that Capone appeared in court. lawyers made a long argument before the Judge. His Honor said he would reserve decision. and announce the Sentence tomorrow on the big gangster will be passed tomorrow.

story, and I don't suppose any of you would mind being burglarized in this fashion. Two young men walked into a drug-store at Danville, Indiana. They said they wanted change for a $20 bill. And they laid the $20 bill on the counter.

A. G. Kelleher, the clerk, opened the cash drawer for the change. The two young men whipped out guns and said, "Form over the money in that drawer,"

And the clerk obeyed. He scooped out the money and handed it to the robbers. It amounted to $11 in all. The two burglars were so nervous that they hurried out, leaving the $20 bill on the counter.

And that, as the United Press points out, left the clerk with a profit of nine dollars.

Now come a few emphatic words about the business situation. They're 3 from Charles M. Schwab who spoke today at the semi-annual meeting of the American Iron and Steel Institute.

Mr. Schwab believes that everything is set for a radical improvement in business conditions. said that things were set in this country last spring. Business was improving. Then came the financial crisis in Europe with Germany and England in a Jam. bad way, and that delayed the American recovery.

The United Press quotes the steel magnate as saying that he has seen the country pull through too many crises to be a pessimist now.

In other words, says ch 3 "cheer up."

Those conversations in Washington are going strong. I mean the talks between Premier Laval of France and President Hoover. Nothing definite has been given out, except that all questions of international importance are being frankly discussed. They come under three headings: disarmament, reparations and war debts, and international co-operation to restore

One line of comment is that the Premier and the President are agreed that something should be done in all three matters, but that they are not quite in harmony on the subject of HOW. They are saying, "Yes, we know what should be done, but how are we going to do it?"

William Phillip Sims, the foreign editor of the Scripps-Howard newspapers, gives the opinion that on disarmament, for instance, both France and the United States are eager for a cut in the military establishments of the nations. But the American idea is that the way to disarm is to disarm. And that also will bring international security.

But the French don't believe that immunational mammin security will be a necessary result of disarmament. They think that national security should be established first, and then it will be time to disarm.

Meanwhile, a good deal of attention is being paid to Premier Laval's pretty daughter, Josee Laval. She is only 19 and seems to be thrilled by Washington, especially by the shops. She has been skipping, around with the daughter of the French ambassador, and they seem to be having a grand time. Captivating everyone with her charms.

Now comes xxx word about unemployment relief, and it is cabled from a country where there isn't supposed to be any kind of unemployment.

An appropriation was approved today in Paris. It calls for the expenditure of three billion francs. 8 approximately one hundred and twenty million dollars. It is to be spent for public improvements throughout France, roads, harbors, schools, hygiene, agriculture, and civil aviation. And one of the big ideas, says the International News Service, is that all this work will help to relieve unemployment.

Things xxxxxxxxx looked pretty bright over at Geneva earlier in the day, but then they took a The last word seems to be that Japan is blocking the proposal that Japanese troops get out of the disputed parts of Manchuria by November 16th.

It looked for a while as if everything might be settled. The Associated Press reports that the Japanese delegate spoke as if his country ready to yield to the demand made by the League of Nations, that is, the demand that Japan must withdraw her 15 troops by November 16th.

Then Dr. Sze, the Chinese delegate, announced in the name of his government that the proposal was O. K. 19 He said it didn't accomplish all that China wanted, but nevertheless the Chinese government would accept.

But right after that the Japanese delegate came back to the contention which Japan has made all along. It is, says the International News Service, that before the Japanese get out the Chinese government will have 3 to make full and complete guarantees that the Japanese residents in Manchuria will be safe and unmolested.

And that's the way things stood 7 when the League Council ended its 8 session this evening. Foreign Minister Briand of France called upon the Chinese and Japanese to reflect overnight.

The League Council will meet again tomorrow morning.

Tall Story

These are active days for the Tall Story Club. It seems that local chapters of the truth-telling brotherhood are being established at various places.

Take Fanwood, New Jersey, for instance.

The exalted Ananias there is F. Gregory Hartswick, of cross-word puzzle fame. Greg is one of the group of three who created the cross-word puzzle fad.

But Greg is also a tall-story teller of great talent. He story the Well, it was inevitable that Fanwood should have a Tall Story Club. Last Saturday night the inhabitants listened to the broadcast of the foundation of the New York Chapter. And the question immediately arose, Was Fanwood to be behind New York? The answer was, NO! NEVER! Don't Fanwoodites talk as tall as the citizenry of New York, or any other place? Yes, they do.

And so the Fanwood branch of the Tall Story Club was promptly formed. Let me give you an extract from the minutes of the first meeting.

The assembled tail-story tellers unanimously agreed that Fanwood is a great and flourishing community. In fact, Fanwoodites remind one of the Californian who went to a fine funeral. After the sermon the parson asked if any friends of the deceased would like to speak. There was silence for a moment, until the native son arose and said:

"If no one has any remarks to make about the dear departed, I'd like to say a few words about California."

And so, the Fanwoodites, had a few words to say about Fanwood. Commissioner Sheelen told how a stranger to the town said to him the other day:

"What do you think about the depression?"

"The Commissioner thought for a moment in a puzzled way, and then said:

"Depression? Depression? Oh yes, you mean that low spot in Postmaster Young's farm."

when the soil down this way is so fertile? The other evening a citizen was bringing home a lot of stude his wife had ordered, and the bag with the groceries in it fell out of the car. He went back to look for it in the daylight, and found that full course dinner had sprung up by the side of the road. The dinner was complete even to salad dressing, because when the vineger bottle hit the ground, it struck oil.

And the Fanwood meeting adjourned with the passing of the unanimous resolution to adopt that new Literary Digest book - "Tall Stories," as the exalted manual of Fanwood Chapter of the Tall Story Club.

Well, Gregg, that cortainly was tall, but here's one that the International News Service passes along which will make your Fanwood Tall Story Xuxxxxxxxxx tellers pale with envy.

This is an example of the great Chinese whopper, and it's told by Fong Sai Cook.

Mr. Fong is being held by the Immigration authorities in San Francisco. They are going to deport him back to China. The Immigration authorities asked him to explain how he got into this country, and here's the explanation Fong Sai Cook has to give:

"I came on a big steamer", he declares. "Outside of the Golden Gate the steamer sank and went to the bottom. Everybody was drowned except me. I swam ashore with my trunk."

Yes, that certainly is the great Chinese whopper, but Fong Sai Cook is sticking to his story. He's a celestial anamas.

And another story of Chinese trying to get into the country comes from Miami, Florida, Ten starving Chinamen have just been rescued from an uninhabited island off the Florida coast. The United Press describes them as hungry, thirsty, and badly bitten by swarms of mosquitos. They say they were landed off a boat on Tuesday night. They had paid from 200 to 400 dollars each to be put ashore on the United States.

They were merely tanded on the deserted island, and left there. The authorities gave them food and water, and tonight they are in a local jail.

And then there's another strange story of an alien in the United States. It tells of the case of Najib Saab—Abound. The immigration authorities are trying to deport Najib as an undesirable alien. Yes, they want to send him back to his own country. But now they find that his country has gone out of existence.

The New York Sun explains that he comes from a part of Syria which used to be recognized as a country. But since the World War it has been under a French mandate, and the inhabitants have been given two years to register as French citizens.

Najib has been in the United States since 1911, and his status now is that of a man who is a citizen of the country which has gone out of existence.

and my status now is that of a man who has run out of time — and Solong until tomorrow.
