PARIS

In Paris -- DeGaulle today announced plans to visit late
Canada in July. The news immediately raising speculation
-- that he may also visit the United States at the same time.

However, DeGaulle aids saying only -- that details of the trip were still in the planning stage, and based so far solely on DeGaulle's determination -- to make the visit, quote, "a memorable reaffirmation of French-Canadian friendship."

ADD PARIS

Of course he'll visit -- Expo Sixty-Seven; which opened officially today -- in Montreal.

Canadian Prime Minister Lester Pearson personally lighting the flame -- that will burn throughout the six months' fair. Then taking dignitaries from some sixty nations -- on a grand tour of the lavish exhibition.

Expo Sixty-Seven -- surely a sight to behold.

-----00-----

And there's an International Exposition in session this week, here in Nevada -- the Intern-Expos of Flight -- and a general conference, to discuss American and world aviation problems -- airlines, military, manufacturers -- and private flyers and their special problems. Arthur Godfrey and a few more of us are taking part in this at the Los Vegas convention hall tonight. The exposition is organized by Capts. Fred Austin and Harrison Finch, the two who, a year and a half ago, organized the great flight around the world over both poles.

RED CHINA

Latest from Peking -- an indication today of continuing turmoil -- in Red China's vast Liberation Army. This apparent from an editorial -- in the official Army newspaper; demanding a new, stepped-up drive against those remaining officers who still oppose Chairman Mao.

Meanwhile, China watchers were remarking today -- on the amazing staying power of President Liu Shao-Chi. For all the attacks on him by Mao supporters -- he is reported still in Peking -- still free -- still President; and apparently still has considerable strength -- throughout Red China.

MATO GROSSO

Doctor Ian Bishop -- a Zoologist from England's Leicester University -- has arrived in Brazil for final preparations pertaining to an expedition that will include other British scientists next month, deep in the Mato Grosso a region twice the size of Texas -- still largely unexplored. A hostile area where death may lurk behind any tree -- Indians with poisoned arrows; or wild animals; to say nothing of the rivers infested with flesh-eating Piranha; the region where Colonel Fawcett vanished in ~~nineteen~~-twenty-five while searching for the remains -- of what he believed was once a great civilization.

This time the adventurers will try to map a new route, a great highway Brazil hopes to build one day across the Mato Grosso; to open it up to what we call the Progress of Civilization. Will they find any trace of that long ago Fawcett expedition? Who knows.

Fawcett who would be a hundred years old now, took

MATO GROSSO--2

with him two young men -- his son, Jack Fawcett, and Ralei Rommel; both of whom could still be alive -- in their early sixties.

"Jack Fawcett -- I presume." What a thrill -- that would be!

TELLER

Here's something of a switch: A prediction today that peace time use of Hydrogen bombs -- could turn out to be an effective weapon against city smog. The authority for this -- no less than Doctor Edward Teller -- so-called "Father of the H Bomb".

Doctor Teller in Washington -- for a spring meeting of the American Physical Society; telling fellow delegates that underground Nuclear explosions -- could release trillions of tons of Sulphur-free natural gas; and reduce smog -- said Doctor Teller -- since it contributes far less to air pollution than other fuels.

Turning to outer space -- Doctor Teller adding that nuclear explosives could also prove to be the best way -- to discover the inner resources of the moon.

CHICAGO

The prying eye of television -- capable of going almost anywhere these days. And that includes the inside of the human body -- according to word today from Chicago.

Doctor Irving Bush of Cook County Hospital -- explaining the technique. Beginning with a tubular instrument -- called a cystoscope; equipped with a series of camera lenses -- and then inserted into the body to relay what it "sees" -- to a closed circuit television screen, to enable doctors to observe a patients internal organs at work -- and then prescribe treatment if necessary. With the patient also actually able to see what ails him.

Best of all -- says Doctor Bush -- all this to be video-taped for summer re-runs in training schools; or even for "home movies?"

DERBY

In the four years since the tragic death of President Kennedy -- his name has been memorialized in countless ways. In roads, buildings, institutions -- even whole communities. And now -- the strangest memorial of all.

With Kennedy family permission -- a British Brewery today disclosing the news. A plan to name a new pub -- on the outskirts of Derby, England -- the "John F. Kennedy Pub."

Site of the establishment -- in an area known as "American Estate": Where most of the roads have been named after American Presidents and American places. Now the John F. Kennedy Pub with a public bar -- called the "Boston Room;" and a lounge -- called the "Pentagon." And from KLAV -- solong until tomorrow.
