Vince Poisella writes (6 Sept 2010):

came up to see Mom. Connections are a part of our story.
