PARTRIDGE

In eastern Kentucky, near Partridge, eleven more men perished today - in the same mine where fifteen were killed earlier in the week. The victims today, including three Federal mine inspectors who with the help of others were attempting to determine the cause of the first tragedy - when they, too, were caught in an underground explosion.

SOUTH ATLANTIC

It happened in "Moby Dick" - in "Jaws" - and it's happened again in real-life. A killer whale about twenty feet long, ramming and sinking an Italian yacht in the South Atlantic near the Cape Verde Islands. The ship's six man crew escaping on a life raft; picked up thirteen hours later by a passing freighter.

PEKING

In a Japanese news dispatch from Peking there is an indication today that China's Vice Premier Teng may be due for yet another rehabilitation. Teng, as you may recall, was the target of rabid Maoists during China's "cultural revolution" and again in recent weeks. But now he is said to have paid a visit to a Peking University to read some of the wall posters criticizing his conduct. A Chinese source is quoted as saying this "is interpreted as a sign of repentance - even a determination to listen frankly to the masses."

BEIRUT-TEL AVIV

Rebel Army officers in Beirut today established a military command council - to serve as an interim government for Lebanon pending new elections. Meanwhile Lebanon's President Franjeh, is refusing to resign.

Israeli meanwhile, has its troops on full alert along its seventy-two mile border with Lebanon.

LAGOS

The government of Nigeria today announced the public execution of thirty-two men - who allegedly took part in an abortive coup last month. The plotters split into two groups, apparently the better to be seen - then machined gunned to death before thousands of chanting natives.

LUGGAGE

Here at home again - the FAA today announced plans to begin a search of all checked airline luggage, starting April Fifteen. Officials saying this should "contribute significantly" - to reducing the possibility of any bombs being put on planes.

... couple first met. He heard about it then. And they've been going around to study - and since. The bride-to-be described it as "a beautiful bracelet". Friends adding that commoner though she may be - it's not only looks like a Queen, but also like one.

And now for CBS News talk is Lowell Thomas.

STOCKHOLM

At Stockholm - one of the world's most eligible bachelors has made the big decision. Sweden's Twenty-Nine year old King, Carl Gustaf - announcing plans to marry a commoner - and a foreigner at that: Silvia Sommerlath - age Thirty-two - the daughter of a West German businessman.

Miss Sommerlath was a hostess at the Nineteen-Seventy-Two summer Olympics in Munich...when the couple first met. We heard about it then. And they've been going more or less steady - ever since. The bride-to-be - described as a "beautiful brunette". Friends adding that commoner though she may be - she not only looks like a Queen, but acts like one."

And now for CBS News this is Lowell Thomas.
