JIM FISHER

Hello Warren and good evening everybody:

I believe I promised to tell you about a young American I met in Kathmandu - a chap wearing a beard - and he didn't turn out to be a hippie. Most of the bearded boys seem to be.

Jim Fisher did his graduate work at Harvard prior to that he was at Princeton, a student in anthropology. He fell in love with a Princeton girl, the daughter of an RCA scientist. Actually they met at Harvard summer school.

Well first Jim did a two year stint in Nepal with the Peace Corps and he liked this Lost Horizon country so much he went home, married Kathy and brought her out to the Himalayas. He took her deep into a little known region way west of a tiny country called Mustang; only a few miles from the Tibetan border. A Himalayan valley with ten villages where dwell an obscure people called the Mugars. They are true Lamaists. That was the religion of Tibet before Tibet became a Buddhist country.

And when the snows came the Fishers simply couldn't get out of there. They were really locked in beyond two lofty snow bound passes. Living in a hut among an almost unknown people. There they spent a year, Jim doing his anthropology for a doctor's thesis about these Himalayan villagers.

And something else happened - as you might expect - Kathy became pregnant. There they were in remote Yak country. And on paper - paper made by hand from the bark of trees they drew a picture of two yaks - male and female. You turn it over and there were the two yaks - looking down into a small valley at a little yak!

Jim with his bushy beard got Kathy over those high passes in the spring just in time. The day they arrived in Kathmandu a son was born. And what did they name him? Why Yeti of course.

TINSLEY GREEN

From Katmandu let's turn to Tinsley Green, England - for the finals in the British marbles tournament - which is held annually on good Friday. The winner this year - for the fourteenth year in a row - a team called the Toucan Terribles; who are not so terrible. In fact they are pretty darn good.

For the first time there was an attempted invasion by a team of women marble shooters. But when the ladies tried to get in the act they were turned down. The tournament board of control explained that an attractive woman when she kneels to shoot - presents an appearance that is distracting." To say the least. I don't know what the control board members had in mind, do you, Warren?
