

JOHNSON

L.T. Olds, Fisher Wed. Nov. 4th '64.

Those whoops you hear - come from Texas. From a gigantic barbecue - in the style of the Lone Star State. But even Texas - has never seen anything like this.

[Host for the occasion - the President of the United States. Ranking guest - his running mate. And the list continues through Senators and Representatives - down to the members of the working press. Who, however, are not being allowed to file copy from the barbecue. Just enjoy themselves. Which - they no doubt prefer. Especially after being run ragged - during the campaign.]

A victory celebration - by Lyndon Johnson and Hubert Humphrey. And - what a victory! Roughly forty-one million to twenty-~~five~~^{six} million votes - over Goldwater and Miller. Four hundred and eighty-six electoral votes - to fifty-two. ~~The biggest~~^{no} landslide ^{like it} ~~in American political life~~ since F.D.R. buried Alf Landon, in Nineteen Thirty-Six.

Yes, they are whooping it up - at the L.B.J. Ranch. →

As L.B.J. gets ready to begin his first administration - with a personal mandate from the American people. The emphatic mandate - that he asked ^{for.} ~~us to give him,~~

term - "unemployed."

The real question, of course - is political. And for Harry Goldwater that question remains - an open one - including the possibility of another try for the Presidency - in Nineteen Sixty-Eight. The Republican candidate didn't rule that out today - as he was conceding his defeat in Nineteen Sixty-Four.

Moreover, Goldwater stands by - his philosophy and still thinks the G. O. P. can win - under the leadership of Goldwater Republicans. He says the task before the Republican Party for the next four years will be
"to build a machine to cope with the power of the Democrats."

Where will the nucleus of a new political power structure - come from? Why the number of Americans who voted Republican this time.
"Twenty-five million people is a lot" - says Harry Goldwater, and he is

GOLDWATER

The magnitude of his defeat inevitably raises the question of - Barry Goldwater's future. His place in the Senate - is gone. A casualty of - his nomination for the Presidency. So he is, to use his own term - "unemployed."

The real question, of course - is political. And for Barry Goldwater that question remains - an open one. Including the possibility of another try for the Presidency - in Nineteen Sixty-Eight. The Republican candidate didn't rule that out today - as he was conceding his defeat in Nineteen Sixty-Four.

Moreover, Goldwater stands by - his philosophy and still thinks the G. O. P. can win - under the leadership of Goldwater Republicans. He says the task before the Republican Party for the next four years will be "to build a machine to cope with the power of the Democrats."

Where will the nucleus of a new political power structure - come from? Why the number of Americans who voted Republican this time. "Twenty-five million people is a lot" - says Barry Goldwater; and he is right.

GOVERNORS

In spite of the Johnson landslide - the G.O.P. has a few things to cheer about.

To begin with - the State Houses. The races - critical races - for Governor. By winning eight Governorships - the Republicans assured themselves of a total of seventeen. One more - than before the election.

Some - of the battles were close. Volpe in Massachusetts, Babcock in Montana - Knowles in Wisconsin. But one, as you no doubt already know - was hardly a contest. The omers - didn't look too good in Michigan. President Johnson - swept the Wolverine State. The Republican candidate for Governor - refused to support his party's national ticket. Yet George Romney rode a two-to-one majority - back into the State House in Lansing.

If a challenge to the Goldwater leadership is to be mounted within the G.O.P. - Michigan's Governor Romney seems to have the inside track tonight.

SENATE

The two key races for the Senate - may have turned on the word "carpetbagger." A word used of Robert Kennedy - in New York. And of Pierre Salinger - in California.

The epithet couldn't stop - Kennedy. The brother of the late President, defeating incumbent Kenneth Keating - by two-to-one. Robert Kennedy, running behind President Johnson - in New York, ~~But~~ doing well enough - to win handily.

On the West Coast - a different story. Salinger blames the "carpetbagger" issue - for his defeat. But George Murphy, who certainly used the term during the campaign - claims that his victory means more than that. Namely - a local mandate for the Murphy brand of Republicanism.

Anyway - it's an odd spectacle. President Johnson - blitzing through California ^{with} Salinger - his old news secretary - tumbling off his coattails.

Into the Senate goes an old-time Hollywood star - ~~genial, gregarious~~ ^{genial, gregarious} George Murphy.

CHOU EN-LAI

The announcement that the Premier of Red China is on his way to Moscow - is stirring talk of a rapprochement between the two giants of world Communism. Chou En-lai was one of the men in Peking - who insisted that Khrushchev must go. Now - Khrushchev is gone. While Chou get an invitation to attend - the forty-seventh anniversary of the Bolshevik Revolution.

Chou En-lai would be the obvious man - for the new Soviet leaders to talk to. He's not only the Premier of Red China - but also Peking's top expert on ideology.

BOLIVIA

The President of Bolivia - is in exile tonight.

Victor Paz Estenssoro, stepping out - in the hope that civil war might be averted. Leaving power in the hands of that well-known Latin American institution - a military junta.

You can judge the chaotic condition of LaPaz - by the ~~the~~ fact ^{that} ~~one~~ thousand government officials - have asked for asylum in foreign embassies. Evidently afraid of what might happen to them - should the Communist-led rebels in the streets gain control of the Bolivian capital.

The balance of power is now racking between - the junta and the rebels. With the junta holding the upper hand - as long as there are no big defections from the armed forces. LaPaz - and all of Bolivia - tense tonight. Tension - in the high Andes.

GALILEO

The mention of Galileo in Rome - sounds like a passage from the history of science. Galileo, the founder of mathematical-physics - who got into trouble with the Inquisition in the Seventeenth Century. Accused of maintaining that the earth revolved around the sun.

Of course Copernicus had said the same thing - long before Galileo. And Copernicus - was not denounced. But Galileo made personal enemies - in Rome. He was not quite clear about the physical facts - of heliocentric astronomy. For instance, he thought that the tides were caused - by the motion of the earth. Not - by the attraction of the moon.

Thus, his enemies had a basis - for conspiring against him, And forcing him - to ~~subject~~ abjure Copernican astronomy. One of the worst blunders - ever made by Catholic ecclesiastics.

Today, the Ecumenical Council in Rome was asked - to reverse that decision. Bishop Elchinger of Strasbourg, terming the condemnation - "miserable and unjust." Those words are enough to startle the ghost - of the great scientist, Galileo - vindicated in Rome.

buffered old cardboard box. In the box - some pieces of paper. Nothing to interest boys at play - except that the papers looked rather official.
Stamped with the word - "Admiralty." So they carried their discovery to the hotel on the corner.

That's how the British government got back - a set of secret documents, plans for - a nuclear powered submarine. The plans had disappeared from the desk of a naval officer, and a search by Scotland Yard and the British Secret Service - didn't turn up a clue.

Now the documents themselves have turned up because some scoundrels were looking a hell around a building site - in London.

DOCUMENTS

A group of boys playing on a building site in London - found a battered old cardboard box. In the box - nine pieces of paper. Nothing to interest boys at play - except that the papers looked rather official. Stamped with the word - "Admiralty." So they carried their discovery - to the bobby on the corner.

That's how the British government got back - a set of top secret documents; plans for - a nuclear powered submarine. The plans had disappeared from the car of a naval officer, and a search by Scotland Yard and the British Secret Service - didn't turn up a clue.

Now the documents themselves have turned up because some youngsters were kicking a ball around a building site - in London.
